Softening Of Red Stand On Jap Rule Indicated

U. S. Negotiations Are Disclosed in Clarification of Byrnes Statement

By the Associated Press

Secretary of State Byrnes indicated last night that the United States has been conducting negotiations with Russia over the question of setting up an Allied control council to run Japan.

A State Department statement issued with the Secretary's authority and in clarification of a comment which Byrnes made at his press conference Wednesday spoke of "recent diplomatic exchanges" on this subject.

The department said that these exchanges "indicate" that Russia is not now insisting on a unanimity rule in making decisions for the proposed council which Byrnes is known to oppose vigorously.

Some authorities saw in this development possibility that a compromise over the control council issue may be worked out which would restore a greater degree of harmony among the Allied powers concerned with Japan's future.

However, Russia still has not sent word that she will definitely have a representative at the meeting of the Allied Advisory Commission on Japan next Tuesday. Byrnes has taken the position that this mission should be set up before a control council is imposed, whereas Russia has suggested that the council be created first.

It has never been clear just how such a council would work or whether it would replace or assume authority over the supreme Allied military commander at Tokyo, Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Byrnes was told at his press conference that some question had arisen here as to whether the Russian proposal, made by Foreign Commissar Molotov at London several weeks ago, actually called for a control council over Japan like that set up in Germany.

Truman Still Aims to Visit Dixie Cities

President Truman, at yesterday's heavily-attended White House press-radio conference, indicated that he hopes to maintain his reputation as a "traveling President" unless important affairs in Washington interfere.

Mr. Truman was rather solemn at the outset, but he began to grin when reporters asked him about reports that he was calling off his scheduled trips to the South.

"Mr. President," asked one, "could we clear up the situation about your November trip (to North Carolina and Georgia). Is the scheduled trip still on?"

Still on His Schedule

The President said that it was still on if conditions here were not such as to require his presence in Washington.

"Will you go to Waco, Tex. (December 5)?"

Mr. Truman said this was a tentative appointment. He said that he had been invited to go down there to receive a doctor of law degree from a Baptist school. He said he was inclined to think he would go.

"What would be the betting odds on whether you go to Georgia?"

The Chief Executive, laughing, said that the reporter would have to make his own book.

Assistant Appointed

The first announcement made by President Truman, after the familiar cry of "All in," was that John R. Steelman had been appointed as his special assistant.

"What field is he specializing in?"

The President said that Steelman

He said 10 per cent of arsonists are women.

While Repairing a Tire

C.S. Houck, 47, Former Member Md. House, Is Killed by Auto

Charles S. Houck, jr., 47, of Walkersville, Md., former member of the Maryland House of Delegates and former State commander of the American Legion, was killed yesterday when he was struck by an automobile while repairing a tire on his car near Gaithersburg, Md., on Route 240.

The driver of the automobile Leslie Doody, 17, of Gaithersburg, Md., was charged with reckless driving by Montgomery County Police at Rockville and released on his personal bond for a hearing November 8 in Rockville Police Court.

According to police, Houck and E. Austin James, Frederick lawyer, and the wives were returning from a dinner party at the home of Joseph A. Cantrel, Maryland State department commander of the Legion and counsel to the Montgomery County Commissioners, in Chevy Chase, Md.

The Houck car had a flat tire and was halted by the side of the road about 1:45 a. m., police said, when Doody's car struck Houck and threw him about 30 feet. James told police that Houck was jacking up the automobile when he was hit. James was grazed by the car but was not injured although his shoe was torn off. The two wives were seated in the car.

The body was taken to the Gartner funeral home in Gaithersburg, where Dr. F. J. Broschart, county medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death. The body was removed to Frederick late yesterday.

Houck, who was engaged in the insurance business, was a member of the House of Delegates from 1937 to 1942 and most of that time was chairman of the Frederick County delegation. He was State commander of the Legion in 1935 to 1936 and also was a member of the Elks, the Lions and the Baptist Church.

CHARLES HOUCK, JR.

He formerly had been employed as a reporter on the Baltimore Evening Sun and also had been a reporter and acting city editor of the Frederick Post. He served overseas in the first World War in the Twenty-ninth Division and later was active in the Maryland National Guard.

A Democrat, he was appointed to the Legislature in the 1937 session and was reelected in 1938. In May, 1931, he was acquitted of charges of perjury and attempted obstruction of justice placed by the Baltimore grand jury in the course

Charges of Huge Black Market In Navy Meat Aired in Senate

By the Associated Press

Testimony which Chairman Mead (D., N. Y.), said indicated black market operations in Navy meat at Pearl Harbor was offered yesterday before the Senate War Investigating Committee.

The testimony involved clearance of a Navy officer of charges of taking Government meat and butter, a pig roasting party at which hula dancers entertained, and protests by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz that there had been a complete "miscarriage of justice."

Mead declared the evidence before his group indicated the entire Navy system of investigating charges against its officers and men needed overhauling.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), a committee member, estimated that sales of meat and other Navy equipment at Pearl Harbor might amount to as "much as a million dollars."

Senator Mead, however, placed the amount at about $500,000.

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, opening witness at the lengthy hearing, thanked the Senate group for its inquiry and promised full cooperation in additional investigations.

A report by Lieut. Col. Iven C. Stickney, a Marine investigator, that he had found 1441 pounds of meat and 520 pounds of butter in the locker of Comdr. Laurence Blodgett touched off the present case last February.

The Senate committee was told that Comander Blodgett was exonerated after a series of investigations and a court-martial, and the Marine colonel was transferred and given a poor efficiency rating by his naval superiors.

"They punished an innocent man and promoted two men who should have been punished," observed Mr. Mead.

The Marine wrote to Senators and they took the case up with the Navy Department with the result that the whole matter was reviewed by Admiral Nimiz.

Earl M. Scwartz, civilian in charge of naval supplies, testified that the meat and butter were not fit for human consumption, although it later was ordered distributed to messes for officers and marines.

Navy records showed that while investigations were under way some officers held a native party, known as a luau, for which Commander Blodgett supplied two pigs.

Senator Ferguson asked whether the Navy lawyers who were to pass upon the Blodgett charges were among the guests.

"Yes,' said Capt. Ralph S. Wentworth, Assistant Navy Inspector General.

"And they reviewed the case later and found it all right as well as the pig?"

There was no reply.

Head asked whether the "usual native dancers were at this luau?"

"The record shows there were a few," Captain Wentworth replied with a smile.

A letter from Admiral Nimitz on this party termed it "grossest impropriety."

Commander Blodgett was tried and acquitted by a naval court martial last August. This brought a second letter from Admiral Nimitz deploring the acquittal as a "miscarriage of justice."

Senators were told by the Navy that Commander Blodgett since had been retired and a letter of reprimand has been prepared. Similar letters of reprimand have been prepared for Capt. J. S. Dowell, Blodgett's superior, and Capt. Hunter J. Norton, who was in charge of naval civilian supplies at Pearl Harbor.

Truman Notes Prestige

White House, Capitol Like Idea Of Marshall as Training Head

The Washington Post's suggestion that Gen. George C. Marshall head up the proposed citizens' universal training program was noted at the White House yesterday and received favorable bi-partisan comment on Capitol Hill.

Asked what he thought about it, President Truman told newsmen he was confident General Marshall would add his prestige to the support of the program. The President added, however, that General Marshall is still chief of staff and is needed in that post.

At the Capitol, some bi-partisan adherents of the President's recommendation for military training, as distinguished from military service, said the country would be greatly reassured if General Marshall remained on as chief of staff until Congress has decided the issue, with foreknowledge that he would be in charge. Sentiment appeared divided as to whether Marshall could best head the program as chief of staff, ro as an officer in retirement.

The Post, in its Page One editorial captioned "One More Job for General Marshall," said congressional "doubts and anxieties about universal military training can best be resolved by an assurance that General Marshall himself will conduct the program."

Said House Majority Whip Robert Ramspeck (D., Ga.)—

"Everyone has confidence in General Marshall's leadership. I agree that a lot of people would be reassured if they knew in advance General Marshall is to be in charge."

Navy Tells Secrets of U-Boat War

'Underwater Radar' Among U. S. Devices, Most of Which Are Antiquated Now

By George Connery
Post Staff Writer

Navy spokesmen yesterday described for the first time some of the frantically-developed gadgets and tactics that whipped German's submarines, but at the same time cautioned that these defenses already are largely antequated.

They listed the following as some of the things that can be talked about:

The Sonobuoy, a small buoy tossed overboard from plane or ship in the vicinity of a submarine. This device, in use since 1942, gets the sub's location by sound waves and automatically transmits the information to plane or ship by radio.

Sonar equipment (of which the Sonobuoy is a part), which does under the water what radar does in the air. Germany, the Navy is convinced, was completely surprised that the Allies had such equipment when the war started.

A world-wide network of radio stations to get cross-bearings on U-boats. To the end of the war, the Allies kept tuned in on the sub skippers' conversations.

Whole Concept Changed

German development of a new, high-speed U-boat in the last months of the war changed the whole concept of antisubmarine warfare, Comdr. H. E. Cook declared.

"This means our present tactics, based largely on keeping them under the water, won't work," he said. "This German boat can make 25 knots, fast enough to get through our screens and at our convoys."

Because bombing interfered with construction, none of the fast subs got into action, but several were afloat at the end of the war.

Cook called it the first real submarine, one that can make better

Man Uses Head In Recovery of His Stolen Auto

Because Richard Eberhart, 2234 Observatory pl. nw., recognized his favorite hat on another man's head, he got back his sedan, stolen from him Saturday night.

Eberhart was walking in the 1000 block of Wisconsin ave. nw. yesterday when he saw coming toward him a Negro man wearing a familiar green velour hat. He grabbed the man, ripped off the hat and found his own name printed in the hatband.

Bystanders called the police. When they arrived, the suspect admitted stealing Eberhart's car from the 3100 block of M st. nw., and revealed its location. Police recovered the car in the 2400 block of N st. nw.

Eberhart also got back a favorite pocketknife — from the man's pocket.

The suspect is being held at No. 7 Precinct Station. He has not yet been charged.

House Balks At Changes In Tax Bill

Repeal of Excises And Excess-Profit Levy Main Points Before Conferees

By the Associated Press

The House declined yesterday to concur in Senate amendments to the first peacetime tax-cutting bill which eases wartime burdens by about $5,500,000,000.

The measure now goes to a joint Senate-House Committee to iron out differences.

The complete erasure of 12 million low income persons from the income tax rolls in 1946 is assured, however, as this is not in dispute between the two houses.

2 Principal Contentions

As the committee of Senators and Representatives took over the bill the principal battles pivoted on:

1. House insistence that Congress at this time write only a partial repeal of the war-imposed excess profits taxes on corporations.

2. House belief that a definite cutoff date should be provided for the high wartime excise levies on such things as liquor, luggage, jewelry, furs and cosmetics.

The Senate provided outright repeal of the excess profits levy but declined to write a definite end for the excises on so-called luxuries.

Totals at Variance

As passed by the House, the tax bill reduces 1946 taxes by $5,350,000,000. The Senate upped the cut to $5,788,000,000. The bill brought from the conference probably will be somewhere between these two figures.

Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) appointed as House conferees Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the Ways and Means Committee, and these other Ways and Means members: Cooper (D., Tenn.), Dingell (R., Mich.), Robertson (D., Va.), Knutson (R., Minn.), Reed (R., N. Y.) and Woodruff (R., Mich.). Senate members of the conference committee are Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Finance Committee, Walsh (D., Mass.), Barkley (D., Ky.), LaFollette (Prog., Wis.) and Taft (R., Ohio).

Specific Reductions

The Senate bill proposes to relieve individual income taxpayers by $2,644,000,000 next year, corporations by $2,934,000,000, and owners of automobiles and boats by 140 million dollars through repeal of the use tax.

In addition, it would repeal 70 million dollars in excise taxes on such things as stoves, cameras and sporting goods, imposed in 1941 to discourage the use of scarce materials.

The House bill called for cutting taxes of individuals by $2,627,000,000; corporations $1,888,000,000; car and boat owners, 140 million dollars, and excise taxes, 695 million dollars, through repeal of the wartime levies on luxury and semi-luxury products and through refund of the tax on floor stocks of liquor and light buths.

Ray Halted Hoodless Cars

Senators Told B-29s Broke Up Jap Atom Bomb Experiments

By the Associated Press

Japan was working on development of an atomic bomb during the war, Senators were advised yesterday. The efforts failed because:

1. Japanese physicists reached mistaken conclusions.

2. B-29s demolished the Tokyo laboratory where the experiments were being conducted.

Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told a Senate Military-Commerce Subcommittee about the Japanese activities. He has just returned from Japan where he checked up for the United States Government on what Japanese science accomplished during the war.

Asked by Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.), about reports the Japanese had a "death ray," Compton said they had a magnetic ray which would kill a rabbit at about 30 yards.

"They told us muskrats were much more resistant," he added with a laugh.

The original idea of the ray, he related, was that it could be focused on an airplane engine and by interfering with the ignition system could cause the engine to stop.

"They made it work on a Ford car at 30 to 40 yards if the hood was up," he added. "If the hood was down, the metal shielded the engine."

Compton dismissed as intended for "home psychology" the balloons which Japan floated through the stratosphere to this country with small bombs attached. Japan was being bombed and it made the Japanese people feel good to think that bombs also were falling on the United States, he said.

Compton was one of two scientists who testified in opposition to clamping secrecy on atomic energy and nuclear physics. They said such a step would be fatal to this country's national security.

Dr. Henry DeW. Smyth, Princeton University physicist, put it this way in testimony to the subcommittee considering legislation to create a national science foundation:

"Secrecy in nuclear physics will smother the hope of progress not only in that science but in all the other sciences . . . Continued secrecy means national scientific suicide. It also means international scientific isolation, which is equally fatal to our progress."

Dr. Compton asked the Senators to suppose that at the time the automotive engine was invented the War Department had decided it might have military uses and had imposed secrecy on study of high

Sofia Denies Reds Mass on Turkish Border

Only Occupation Troops in Bulgaria, Newspaper Insists

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 25 (AP).—The government newspaper Zemdelsko Zname today published a denial of the Associated Press report of last Sunday that Russian troops were maneuvering in southern Bulgaria near the Turkish border.

A page 1 three-column headline said:

"Bluff of Agency Associated Press—Neither Soviet troops nor Bulgarian on Turkish Boundary—Nor Large Bulgarian Manufacturers in Bulgaria There—No Other Russian Troops Except Those of Occupation—Denial by Tass Agency."

Tass is the official Russian news agency.

The Morgon Tidningen in Stockholm was quoted as having received a denial from Bulgarian Minister Iliev.

"Iliev stated he is in constant connection with Sofia, but no telegram mentions anything in connection with the news of the Associated Press," the Swedish newspaper was said to have reported.

The account quoted Iliev as commenting: "Possibly the correspondent received false information from a suspicious source. Perhaps the Bulgarian opposition helps publish such information before the elections. This is not the first time false information has been spread with the same purpose. These maneuvers will not influence the result of the elections."

Following the Stockholm story was the denial of Tass under Moscow dateline, and under that the subhead "Announcement of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs" and a story under New York dateline saying a denial had been made by the Bulgarian Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Truman to Tell Wages-Prices Policy on Air

President to Speak For Half Hour at 10 Tuesday Night

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Truman will announce the Government's long-awaited and long-debated policy on wages and prices in a half-hour radio address at 10 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Chief Executive disclosed at his press conference yesterday that the policy is still in an undecided stage. It will be determined however, before he makes his announcement on Tuesday night, he added.

The policy, understood to call for a fairly rigid "hold the line" program on prices, but giving encouragement to wage increases out of profits, increased production and savings in wartime costs, was considered on Wednesday by the Reconversion Advisory Council. It is believed to have encountered considerable opposition with varying objections by representatives of labor, farm, and employer groups.

Another Session Monday

The council is now studying the policy along with several reports and is to meet again on the subject on Monday. Although some modifications are expected to result from the council's recommendations, the basic provisions of the present draft will probably not be drastically modified.

The principal additional disclosures made at yesterday's news conference and bearing on the Nation's labor and economic problems were:

1. Appointment of John R. Steelman, former director of conciliation of the Labor Department, as special assistant to the President. Although Mr. Truman avoided a direct answer to questions on whether Steelman would act in the labor field by stating that he would be used in whatever matters the Presi-

No Immediate Walkout

Big Vote Margin for GM Strike Held Mandate to Push Demand

By the Associated Press

The CIO United Automobile Workers yesterday called the vote of General Motors workers for a strike "a mandate" to the UAW leadership to fight their wage case "to a successful conclusion." However, it does not mean an immediate strike.

Walter P. Reuther, union vice president, gave this interpretation to the vote of 70,853 to 12,497 among 325,000 GM employes in favor of a strike to support demands for a 30 per cent wage rate increase.

The National Labor Relations Board, which supervised balloting in 97 General Motors Corporation plants Wednesday, announced the results as thousands of Chrysler Corporation employes were participating in a similar poll. Ford workers will vote on the same question, November 7.

The union's international executive board, which alone can authorize a walkout, will not do so "unless and until our attempts to arrive at a peaceable settlement fail completely," Reuther explained.

Other major labor developments included:

1. Picketing continued at Warner Brothers' Studio in Hollywood as AFL strikers prepared to resume work at other lots as result of the Cincinnati settlement.

2. American Airlines restored partial service at Chicago and Detroit but 2000 Pan American Airways employes in Miami deferred return to work, recommended by CIO union stewards.

3. Persons on strike or indirectly

Labor Front Chief Uses Towel-Rope To End Life

Is Found Slumped With Rags in Mouth; Was Being Held As War Criminal

Nuernberg, Oct. 25 (AP).—Dr. Robert Ley, former leader of the German Labor Front, committed suicide tonight in his cell by hanging himself with a towel which he tore into strips and knotted.

Ley was awaiting trial as a Nazi war criminal.

The strips of towel were attached to plumbing fixtures and guards found Ley's dead body slumped over a toilet in his cell. His mouth was stuffed with rags torn from his underwear.

The sentinel on duty in the cell block of the criminal wing of the jail, where the 23 major Nazis under indictment as war criminals are awaiting trial, noticed Ley's slumped posture and went into the cell to investigate. He found Ley dead.

Official Pronouncement

The official announcement of the death was made by Prison Commandant Col. B. C. Andrus of Denver, Colo.

It said:

"The sentinel on the post guarding Ley and three adjacent cells noticed that Ley was on the toilet seat while only his knees could be seen through the cell door.

"Upon completion of four rounds, which made the fifth check on that cell in two and one half minutes, he concluded that the prisoner had been sitting there too long. Coincidentally the corporal of the guard came along checking on the turning in of eyeglasses which were taken from the prisoner at night.

"The sentinel called the prisoner by name and received no answer. They entered the cell and discovered Ley was on the toilet seat. His mouth was stuffed with rags torn from underwear.

'Around his neck was the hemmed edge of a towel fastened to the top of the flush pipe of the toilet. The guard called the prison officer, Lieut. Gaul H. Graven, Madison, Wis., who cut the prisoner down."

Woman Killed In Fall From RFC Building

A pretty 30-year-old woman plunged to her death from the eleventh floor of the RFC Building, Vermont ave. and I st. nw., about 5:30 p. m. yesterday.

She was tentatively identified as Mrs. Jean Weber of 3719 12th st. ne., a clerk in the Office of Metals Reserve, RFC.

Richard J. Lynch of 1020 4th st. ne., a guard for the Railway Express Agency, saw the body strike. He was standing in a driveway behind the building when the body landed on the cement driveway virtually at his feet.

"I heard a noise like a shot," Lynch declared. "I saw the woman when she was about 6 feet off the ground. She landed flat on her back."

Lynch reported he did not hear her scream or utter any sound. She was killed instantly, he said.

Considerable confusion followed the incident. Mrs. Weber wore street clothes but no pocketbook could be found in the driveway. Nobody at first knew from which floor she had fallen.

Police and guards searched the building and found her pocketbook in a wash room on the eleventh floor. The window in the room was open. Miss Gladys McCarthy, 1919 Biltmore st. nw., first identified the body.

Mrs. Weber was pronounced dead by a doctor from Emergency Hospital at 5:35 p. m.

Mrs. Weber was the wife of Second Lieut. Raymond Joseph Weber, USMC. He was reported in Philadelphia last night. He is the nephew of Police Capt. Charles Weber of No. 13 police station.

She lived with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Annie T. Weber, at the 12th st. home. The latter said last night her sister-in-law was from California and had been employed at the RFC since October 9.

Sentence Awaited By Three Youths In Escapee Case

Awaiting sentence today were three youths who pleaded guilty yesterday to helping conceal an escaped prisoner.

The trio, Gilbert L. Follin, 18, and Joseph C. Loveless, 19, both of 2604½ L st. nw., and Francis X. Brosnahan, 18 of 413 I st. ne. A similar charge against Charles R. Reese, 19 of 2404 Pennsylvania ave. nw., was not prosecuted.

District Court Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws referred the case to the probation office for investigation.

The three pleaded guilty to helping to harbor Elmer F. Norton, 20, one of three prisoners who escaped from deputy U. S. Marshals last January in the District jail yard.

ney, was advanced to full colonel and given a special commendation on Forrestal's order.

Records of the Navy inquiry showed that Commander Blodgett was popular while Colonel Stickney was regarded as "an old buttinsky."

Senator Ferguson questioned the naval investigators about additional inquiries now under way on "the illegal sale of beef, butter and other war-scarce products that were rationed in this country and sold on the black market at Pearl Harbor."

Large Sales Reported

The Navy offered a report showing "sales of raw meat in large quantities" to what Senator Ferguson described as restaurants, taverns and "hot dog stands."

The Navy witnesses said they had completed data on "gambling and sales of ship service supplies." They said letters of reprimand were being prepared against Capt. John H. Kangeter, USNR, and Lieut. John E. Carter, USNR.

They also said Federal Court action would be taken against Ewell Phillips, a civilian who was head butcher at the Navy supply center for Civilian Housing Area No. 3 near Pearl Harbor.

Full Inquiry Continuing

Both Navy and Marine officers said they and the Federal Bureau of Investigation were continuing a full inquiry into all charges raised by the Blodgett case. In answer to questions of Senators, they said no action could be taken against naval officers who sat on the court-martial which freed Blodgett.

They added that Admiral Nimitz had directed that each officer receive a copy of his letter which criticized their action in clearing Commander Blodgett.

The officers were identified as Capt. Edward D. Washburn, jr. (retired), Capt. Alvin O. Lustle, Capt. Arthur S. Walton (retired), Comdr. William J. Ashley, Comdr. Denis D. Humphreys, Comdr. Harold E. Snow (retired) and Comdr. Frederick G. Arnold.

"Other countries operating without such prohibitions would have forged far ahead of us," he said. "When this world war broke out we would have lacked what was perhaps our greatest asset, namely, the great industrial know-how and productive capacity which enabled us to throw overpowering amounts of mechanized equipment into the field.

Dr. Smyth, who helped develop the atomic bomb and wrote the War Department's report on it, said he was not recommending publication of details of the manufacture of atomic explosives or of how the atomic bomb is finally put together. But that is the only secret which should be kept, he said.

Compton declared the free exchange of information is of "the utmost importance" in opening a great new field of science.

D. C. Naval Pilot Spares Ga. Town In Fatal Crash

Rather than endanger the lives of others by abandoning his plane over a crowded community on the outskirts of Atlanta, Ba., Ensign John Joseph Fuller 21, of 2725 31st st. nw., Monday night piloted his plane to flaming destruction in a wooded area, it became known yesterday.

Mrs. Mary Fuller, his widowed mother, yesterday received a letter from residents of the Kirkwood section of Atlanta, which said: "Ensign Fuller could have jumped from his plane 5 miles away, for it was in trouble long before it crashed, but he wouldn't leave his plane to crash into a thickly settled community below. He crashed into the only wooded sector for miles around, headed in the opposite direction from the airfield, as if he were hunting it . . ."

Ensign Fuller was a student at Georgetown University before his enlistment as an aviation cadet in March, 1943.

Senate Described As 'Tobacco Barn'

Senator Charles O. Andrews (D., Fla.) said in a radio interview yesterday that one of his constituents told him, "the way the Senate is fixed up right now it would make a good barn for hanging and curing tobacco."

Andrews is chairman of the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee and author of an act that authorizes funds for the beautifying of the Senate and House wings of the Capitol building. He said in his talk over WOL that the work would be undertaken this summer.

Backs Broken in March, 1943

The Allies "broke the U-boats' backs" in the six months starting in March, 1943, Cook declared. However, in that month the Germans got their hands on one of the devices that led to their defeat—an S-band radar. It took them six months to figure out a defense and install the necessary equipment on their subs. But then it was too late.

The Germans, Cook said, didn't believe it possible to handle the amounts of power that the S-band used on its frequency.

Another development of March, 1943, was the advent of the first CVE's or jeep carriers in the North Atlantic, whose planes searched out the U-boats with the new radar. The CVE's closed up the gap, gave convoys complete air protection across the Atlantic.

Undr Strictest Secrecy

During the entire war period anti-submarine work was carried on under the strictest secrecy. Only through rumors, vague stories and a periodic Roosevelt-Churchill statement on number of U-boats sunk did the public learn that the battle of the Atlantic was being won.

"Why, we couldn't even tell our families where we had been, what we were doing or the equipment we used," Capt. H. B. Vosseller said. "We couldn't mention the word radar, because the Germans themselves didn't know what we were using to run down their subs."

Vosseller commanded a CVE that had one of the best records for kills.

Dr. J. Steinhardt, a Navy Department civilian engineer praised the fliers who scoured the Atlantic in all kinds of weather, day and night, keeping the U-boats down and sinking those caught on the surface.

MARSHALL

(D., Tex.), a member of the House Military Committee, said:

"I believe the Nation has absolute confidence in General Marshall. I believe he is one of the very few professional soldiers whom the people would trust with full confidence that he would not militarize the program. I think the whole point in the President's message is that this would be a separate civilian organization. After his retirement, General Marshall would be the ideal man to head it up."

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) commented:

"I think it would be very reassuring to Congress and the country to know General Marshall himself would set up the program. Probably the only way he could do that is to remain on as chief of staff, and direct the program as chief of staff. That is one of the reasons I earnestly hope the general does not retire for some time."

Senator Warren R. Austin (R., Vt.), ranking minority member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee remarked:

"I have no doubt that the selection of General Marshall to head the Universal Military Training program would add prestige to the movement and it would certainly assure success of that program.

"The question of the necessary support of the country for the enactment of this program is the first consideration. I agree, that if General Marshall were named to conduct the program, the whole country would feel more comfortable about it."

Indonesians Agree to Talks With the Dutch

Batavia, Java, Oct. 25 (AP).—The "Free Indonesian Republic" declared tonight it would negotiate with the Dutch, provided the principle of self-determination for Indonesians was recognized and that a third party, presumably an American, was present.

H. J. Van Mook, acting governor of the Netherlands East Indies, had asked members of President Soekarno's cabinet to meet with him in an attempt to bring peace to the rich Dutch colony.

Tonight Soekarno's Minister of Information, in apparent reply, insisted on the two conditions for the opening of "informal discussions" looking toward a final conference. He declared the Indonesian question was "vital to a lasting peace in the Pacific."

Asks American Mediation

Soekarno himself appealed to the United States in a broadcast last night to act as mediator, and said he represented 70 million Indonesians.

Soekarno's appeal was broadcast over a British-controlled station. Observers said permission to use the station indicated a change in British policy.

(In London, the British Foreign Office said it had not been advised of Soekarno's use of the station.)

Walter A. Foote, U. S. Consul General in Batavia, may be asked to act as mediator, with the American consulate the probable conference headquarters.

(London recorded a broadcast by the "Free Indonesia" radio asserting the Nationalists would fight "with our bare hands if we have no other weapon with which to defend our independence." The broadcast related an invitation from Soekarno to world leaders to study conditions in the Netherland East Indies.)

Soerabaja Occupied

Meanwhile, the Forty-ninth Indian Brigade occupied Soerabaja without opposition, taking over control of that important naval base on the north coast of Java from the Indonesians and establishing a British control center. Pilots returning from Soerabaja said the city was calm, but the red and white flags of the Indonesian republic were being displayed prominently.

(Aneta quoted the Melbourne radio as saying that General Nakamura, Japanese commander in central Java, had been arrested by the British for "permitting his troops to surrender their arms to the Indonesians instead of keeping them.") out of work because of labor controversies over the Nation totaled 222,000, a slight drop from Wednesday.

STRIKES

Both the UAW and General Motors predicted the NLRB vote would favor a strike and both expressed a hope none would be called. The company promised a formal statement on wage negotiations, in progress for days, within ten days.

The company has maintained it would be unable to meet union wage demands and sell automobiles at a profit under the Government's current wage-price program. The union insisted the company could do so and realize higher profits at the same time.

Pickets Reappear at Warners'

The eight-month motion picture dispute was ended for all producers concerned except Warner Brothers where hundreds of pickets reappeared at gates and at least one striker was injured.

Herbert K. Sorrell, strike leader, said Warners was not classed with other producers "because they used tear gas and water" on pickets massed at studio entrances during the last weeks of the walkout.

"We are asking Warners to indemnify every person hurt on this picket line," Sorrell said. He estimated 300 persons would have claims, some for $500 each. "Nobody wants to go to work for Warner Brothers until they pay up."

Most of the 7000 AFL Conference of Studio Unions' strikers, out since March 12, were expected back at work at othor studios by Monday at the latest. Under the settlement, the AFL executive council set up machinery for disposing of issues. The walkout was based on a controversy between two AFL organizations over jurisdiction over 77 set decorators.

Settlement of the protracted motion picture strike highlighted the 10-day meeting of the AFL executive council in Cincinnati. In concluding its sessions the council did not make public any specific policies to be carried to the Government-sponsored labor-management meeting in Washington November 5.

President William Green of the AFL said his organization was against any no-strike pledge and any form of compulsory arbitration. He said specific AFL policies would be completed at a council meeting the day preceding the Washington conference.

In Jersey City, N. J., bus strikes were extended to a third independent line as 70 drivers walked out, bringing the number of passengers inconvenienced up to 100,000.

5000 Chinese War Criminals Given Opium Treatment

Nanking, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—More than 5000 traitors and pro-Japanese collaborators, including seven high-ranking officials of the Nanking puppet regime, all detained at Nanking, have proved to be opium addicts and are being given daily treatments to prevent their collapse, it was reported today.

Chinese authorities are working to stamp out opium smoking, which the Japanese encouraged during the occupation.

Since the Japanese surrender and the attendant disruption of transport, opium prices have soared rapidly, and the drug now commands more than $700,000 Nanking ($3 United States) per ounce.

was to b ehis assistant in any field he wanted to use him.

"Is this a temporary appointment or a permanent one?"

The answer was temporary.

"Will he work on labor relations?"

The President repeated that Steelman would work on whatever he was assigned to work on.

Help For Philippines

"Is he a specialist in labor?"

Mr. Truman agreed that Steelman was a labor expert.

The President then made an oral statement about the Philippines and told the reporters that they would be given a special news release on the matter. He said that since the arrival in Washington of President Osmena of the Philippines, he had held sveeral conferences with him and Secretary Ickes and Paul V. McNutt. He went on to add that the Filipinos have been our friends in this war and they are now in dire need of our help. The President said that some progress had been made and that further conferences would be held with President Osmena, Secretary Ickes and McNutt.

Letters From Leaders

Mr. Truman told the conference he had received a letter from William Green, Philip Murray, Ira Mosher and Eric Johnston on labor-management conferences and an agenda on the cofereces.

He ext announced that he would speak over the radio at 10 o'clock Tuesday night and would descuss the wage-price program.

"Will this speech be on all networks,"

Mr. Truman said it would.

"Wil you speak for a half hour as usual?

The reply was yes.

New Presidential Flag

"Has the policy been decided yet?

The President answered that the policy was now being decided, and would be decided before he makes the announcement Tuesday night.

Mr. Truman displayed a new presidential flag, and explained that he had signed an executive order for it. He said that the flag was ordered by President Roosevelt before his death, and that it was the result of an order by President Wilson. In President Wilson's time there were two flags, one of the Army and one of the Navy, and he (Wilson) ordered a single flag for the President.

The presidential trips were next discussed by Mr. Truman.

He was then asked if he had decided to accept Reconversion Director John Snyder's resignation.

The President said that Snyder's resignation had never been considered and that he would stay as long as he was needed and until the job is finished.

"He has not resigned?"

Mr. Truman said no, and repeated that he would stay as long as he is needed here.

The next question was: "The Washington Post in an article this morning suggested that General Marshall head the universal military training program. Granted he needs a rest, The Post thinks he would add prestige to the program."

Still Chief of Staff

The President's reply was that he thinks General Marshall will add prestige to the universal training program, but he is still chief of staff and is needed as chief of staff.

"Have you seen Henry Ford 2d this week?"

Mr. Truman said no; Ford came to see the Secretary of Labor.

"After Mr. Wilson of General Motors visited here this week, he talked about a 45-hour week. Did he get any encouragement here?"

The reply was that he did not.

Considered Crowley

"Are you considering Leo Crowley for appointment to the Export-Import Bank?"

The President said he has not made up his mind, but he has considered Mr. Crowley for the board of the Export-Import Bank.

"There seems to be some doubt about Mr. Crowley's departure from the FDIC and the FEA. He wrote a letter to you asking your acceptance of both resignations. Two Congressmen have told me that it is up to you. Could you release that letter?"

The letters are around his office, the President told the conference, but he said that their conversation was verbal and Crowley's resignation was accepted because he insisted on being allowed to return to his personal affairs. He was not urged to quit, Mr. Truman said.

The next question was "Upon whose advice, if there was anybody, did you urge that the know-how of the atomic bomb be kept secret?"

The President replied that it was his own judgment.

"When do you expect to begin discussions for control of the atomic bomb?"

That would be announced at a later date, Mr. Truman said.

Byrnes Handling Russia

"Have you received any word on whether Russia will attend the Far Eastern Advisory Council meeting?"

Mr. Truman said that the matter is being handled by the Secretary of State and he has not been in touch with the Secretary on the subject.

"In a press conference Mr. Byrnes said he had not seen or read the Italian Armistice. Have you studied the Armistice?"

The answer was no.

"Have you made a selection for the chairman of Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation?"

Action on Job Bill

Mr. Truman had not.

"Are you considering any Congressman on the Hill?"

The President said he was not considering anyobody at the present time.

He was next asked if he had urged Congress to speed action in the House on passage of the full employment bill.

To this Mr. Truman answered that he had. He has asked that the bill be speeded up, and added that he is fo wtirhtihad he is for it with everything he has.

Includes John Lewis

"Do you expect to talk with the president of the United Rubber Workers Union this week?"

Mr. Truman said he expects to talk to everyone invited in this week. If the union president is on that list, then the President will talk to him.

"Does that include, John L. Lewis?"

The answer was yes.

"When?" someone asked.

The agenda has not been made up, the President replied.

Wants Bill Voted On

"Did Congressman Manasco tell you that the (full employment) bill would have difficulty in being reported out or would not be passed without an amendment?"

The President said that the representative told him he would have difficulty in getting the bill reported out, but Mr. Truman said he wanted it reported out so that it could be voted upon.

"Going back o Mr. Snyder, has he ever expressed a desire to resign?"

The answer was that he has not.

The conference was ended with the usua "Thank you, Mr. President," at4:14 p. m.

Labor Parley Agenda

2. Announcement of the agenda of the labor-management conference to meet here November 5. Although it does not preclude discussion of broad issueson wages, prices, full employment and legislation, the agenda as it now stands indicates the conference will be principally concerned with problems of management-union, contracts, negotiations, dispute settlement procedures and machinery.

3. Emphatic support by the President for the Full Employment bill. Mr. Truman asked for speedy action by the House Expenditures Committee to report out the bill and said he was for it with everything he has.

Witsell Seeks to Allay Worry Over Job Loss

CALM DOWN: This, in effect, is what the adjutant general, Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, told his employes here yesterday. General Witsell said he had been informed that his employes were worried over their jobs and that some had resigned. He said there was no reason to be concerned as AGO would not begin to lay off employes for some time. In fact, the office is still hiring. The general explained that his office here had a staff of 8280 on August 1 and by the end of December it would increase to 8765. By April 1, he said, the office would go down only a hundred. The general told his employes that their responsibilities had increased with demobilization and the resulting task of compiling a record of each person who served in the Army during the war. Employes whose work is completed will be transferred to other jobs with AGO.

DIARY NOTES: Interior plans to transfer the statistical section of Solid Fuels Administration to the Bureau of Mines. SFA will fold up by June 30. The statistical unit is a permanent function which was taken out of the Bureau of Mines several years ago. It has the Government's only record on coal production . . . The Weather Bureau estimates that it saves business a billion dollars a year by its forecasts and storm warnings . . . John Snyder plans to increase his staff in the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion from 87 to 114 . . . A check shows that only 40 per cent of the Rural Electrification Arministration employes in St. Louis will come to Washington. Most of the clerical help will remain in that city to work in the Army's huge record project there. This all means that Agriculture must recruit from 300 to 400 employes here to staff REA.

INEXCUSABLE: Why Federal employes who are dismissed aren't given their back pay and acumulated annual leave promptly is one of those things something must be done to correct—and immediately. The War Production Board laid off more than 1000 employes at the end of September, and a good many of these persons still haven't been given their final pay checks. Employes laid off from the War Department three and four months ago haven't received refunds for retirement. Foreign Economic has been slow in paying employes for acumulated leave. Much the same is true for employes who have been fired from the Office of War Information, Office of Defense Transportation and half a dozen ther war agencies. The separated employes need the money and they should be given their final pay checks and accumulated leave, if they request it, the last day of duty. The agencies know from two weeks to a month which employes are to be fired, and they should see to it that each separated employe is given everything that's coming to him.

POLICY: There can be no good excuse for delaying final paychecks a month or a day. The average employe has his final paycheck plus about 10 days due him when he is discharged. The 10 days is accounted for by the fact that there is a lag between the time the employe earns his salary and when he is paid. The lag runs up to two weeks in a few agencies. All sorts of needless arguments are going on in liquidating agencies over this withheld salary which should be paid promptly to every discharged employe. And no argument. Annual leave and retirement payments are necessarily delayed. No employe may be paid his annual leave while he is on furlough but if he declines a furlough there is no reason why he shouldn't be paid promptly. The employe who expects to leave Government should make out an application for retirement refund before he goes off active duty. Civil Service will make payment in a few weeks—less than a month—but it sometimes takes agencies like the War Department several months to get the papers to Civil Service. All this delay and inconvenience to discharged employes demands prompt attention.

MORE NOTES: The National Lawyers Guild is all out for the reestablishment of the Board of Legal Examiners to handle personnel problems of Government lawyers. It also favors: (1) higher salaries; (2) protection of reemployment rights of veterans; (3) severance pay, unemployment compensation, an dtravel allowance of discharged lawyers, and (4) establishment of a reemployment register for discharged lawyers. A meeting to discuss these points will be held tonight in th eArchives Auditorium . . . Naval personnel who have served a year or more in this country are eligible to wear the new American campaign ribbon . . . Labor Department officials predict that thousands of U. S. Employment Service employes will lose their jobs when USES is turned back to the States. New exams must b eheld and inexperienced people will be put in the jobs. It's estimated that USES will be called on to find jobs for 20 million persons between now and June 30. Further, that the agency will have 95 million calls for service . . . Mrs. Mary E. Badurski and John B. Anderson of the Judge Advocate General's Office have been awarded the meritorious civilian service emblem for 25 years each of outstanding work.

Now that the President won't announce the Administration wage and price policy until Tuesday night, hearings on the Downey bill probably will be delayed again. Hearings are scheduled to start Monday on the bill that would raise salaries of Federal workers by 20 per cent. . . . The Commerce wage board has recommended to Secretary Wallace a 15 per cent increase in the salaries of lithographic employes in the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Weather Bureau. Also a 10 per cent night differential and full time and a half for overtime. The increase will become effective with the Secretary's approval.

Darden Lashes Back at Critics Of Truck Tax

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Terming the statements of Reed I. West, president of the Virginia Highway Users Association, and Charles Ray, director of safety engineering for the Marel Service, as "nothing more" than intemperate and irresponsible garrulousness," Governor Darden today lashed back at the two men who criticized his abrogation of the motor-freight reciprocity agreement with other States.

"The angry statements" of the two men were declared by the Governor to "show a curious lack of understanding of the situation. I cannot believe that the outburst of these gentlemen represents the view of the Virginia motor transport industry."

Prewar Pact Cited

West said yesterday that the Governor's action in rescinding the agreement would "result in arousing ill feeling toward this State," while Ray declared that Virginia's motor transport "cannot survive under the Darden plan of isolation." Both said the action was the result of a decision reached by the Governor, the State highway commissioner, the director of the division of motor vehicles and "one member of the State Corporation Commission." The Governor pointed out today that these men are members of the reciprocity committee.

In canceling the provisions of the reciprocity agreement enacted in late 1942 at the request of the Federal Government so as to impose a 2 per cent gross receipts tax on earnings of out-of-State transport companies, the Governor asserted he was following the course agreed upon at the time the agreement was made.

"Irresponsible" Talk

"For approximately three years taxes amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars have been foregone by the State. Out-of-State motor transport companies have been the direct beneficiaries of this action," he averred. "The time has come for us to reexamine our position. In doing this we are pursuing the precise course that was agreed upon when the reciprocity agreements were executed in the fall of 1942. Virginia has not the slightest desire to deal unfairly with anyone in the imposition of taxes. The Assembly has attempted to impose an equitable charge upon those who use the highways for commercial purposes. Certainly there can be no reasonable objection to this."

"To characterize the step taken—a step imposed by the obligations of my office as 'isolation' and 'injurious to the State' as is done by Mr. West and Mr. Ray is nothing more than intemperate and irresponsible garrulousness," the Governor said.

State Drops Plan To Locate School At Catonsville

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—Governor O'Conor disclosed today that negotiations were under way for a new site for the Cheltenham School for Boys following the State abandonment of a proposal to acquire the Baker estate at Catonsville for relocating the school.

The Governor said he already had issued instructions for new negotiations after approval of the State Board of Welfare and the board of managers of the school. He said that price considerations dictated withholding the location of the site the State is now trying to obtain.

O'Conor added that the Catonsville proposal was abandoned because of neighborhood objections and disapproval of county authorities.

The Cheltenham school is for youthful Negro delinquents.

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—More than 2500 delegates are expected to attend the seventy-eighth annual convention of the Maryland State Teachers Association here tomorrow and Saturday.

In the evening Dr. Walter D. Head, president of the Montclair Academy, Montclair, N. J., will speak. He is a former president of Rotary International and was a consultant at the San Francisco Conference.

Lothrop Stoddard, journalist and Washington news analyst, will speak at the final meeting on Saturday morning.

Council Holds

State Liquor Laws Study Unnecessary

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—The Legislative Council told Governor O'Conor in a letter today that "no sufficient reason" has been found for further study of Maryland's liquor laws.

Senator James J. Lindsay, council chairman, also said in the letter that it would be unnecessary for the Governor to appoint a special committee to consider the laws governing the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Baltimore grand juries, the police commissioner of Baltimore and others have recommended earlier closing hours and prohibition of Sunday sales.

Senator Lindsay said the council devoted three separate days to consideration of possible revisions or amendments, hearing representatives of the grand jury, State comptroller, State's attorney of Baltimore City, police commissioner, Baltimore liquor license board and other public officials, as well as representatives of manufacturers and wholesalers.

2 Rallies Set For Loudoun Bond Drive

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 25 (Spl.).—Samuel Rose, chief of the contact division of the Veterans' Administration, will be the principal speaker at two welcome home rallies for returned servicemen of Loudoun County, which will be held Saturday evening in the Leesburg High School Auditorium and in the Douglass High School Auditorium. These rallies will mark the opening of the Victory Loan drive.

Mr. Rose will tell the veterans and citizens of the county what the Veterans' Administration is going to do for the men who served World War II. At this rally he will announce publicly for the first time a plan of great importance to veterans and their families in this area.

Mrs. John T. Owen, chairman of the women's division, Loudoun war finance committee, will open each rally. Col. Robert H. Fletcher, USA, retired, who is chairman of the Loudoun County Red Cross Chapter, will tell about the services the Red Cross is offering to returned veterans.

Jean N. Chamblin will act as chairman of veterans at Leesburg High School and also as chairman of a veterans committee for the Victory Loan drive. Mr. Chamblin, who was technical sergeant in the Eighth Air Force, served four years during the war.

Richard Gaskins, Upperville, who emerged unscathed from the perilous work of stringing advance communication lines with the 459th Signal Construction Battalion and wears four Battle Stars, is to be chairman at Douglas High School.

The quota for Loudoun County in the Victory Loan drive is $150,000 in E bonds and $550,000 in other bonds for individuals.

Va. Banker Starts 2-Year Sentence

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Alton Thaddeus West, 45, former vice president and cashier of the Citizens National Bank of Petersburg, surrendered to Federal authorities today to begin serving a two-year sentence for violation of the Federal Reserve Act.

West pleaded guilty in Federal District Court October 12 to charges of embezzling $117,600 from the Petersburg bank and was sentenced by Judge Robert N. Pollard. He was released under $10,000 bond for his appearance here today at 11 a. m. to abide by the judgment of the court.

He was taken into custody by Deputy Marshal James A. Braithwaite, lodged in a cell in the marshall's office and later taken to the Federal Reformatory in Petersburg, to begin his two-year sentence this afternoon.

'Rusty' Coal Found Useable

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—Much good coal is being located by bulldozers in stripping operations in western Maryland where there was not thought to be workable coal, the State bureau of mines reported today.

Previous underground operations had not gone to the "crop" coal, it was pointed out, particularly in the case of the big vein mines. Because of the "rusty" looking coal near the surface miners of 40 and 50 years ago did not go beyond a point from 50 to 100 feet for the "crop" coal.

The bureau of mines says the only thing usually objectionable about the "rusty" coal is its appearance. As a rule, though not always, some of this rusty coal burns fairly well under boilers and in household heating equipment.

PSC Upholds Telephone Ban ToBookmakers

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Public Service Commission agreed today to permit the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore to decide which applicants for special line service were qualified to receive it.

The PSC explained it would not alter the telephones company's obligation to furnish private line facilities terminating in loudspeakers in public places, provided there was no evidence that the lines were to be used for "illegal purposes," meaning bookmaking operations.

Old Order Modified

The action, representing a modification of a seven-year-old PSC order requiring the company to furnish private lines for clients of the World Wide News and Music Service, Inc., with respect to private places, followed a hearing on World Wide's complaint that the company had refused to grant facilities for six new subscribers.

During the hearing, Joseph M. Wyatt, counsel for world wide, accused the telephone company of attempting to infer by "innuendo," that Wide World was being operated as a bookmaker's service.

However, World Wide consented to the modification and also withdrew its application for four of the six prospective subscribers when the telephone company agreed to provide facilities to the two Baltimore establishments involved.

In its answer to World Wide's complaint, the telephone company contended that a number of its subscribers had been raided by police, and that its investigation disclosed a number of new applicants were suspected of gambling activities.

"Like Radio Station"

President L. J. Matusky of World Wide News testified its operations resembled that of ordinary radio stations, and that he knew nothing of illicit use of the equipment involved in transmitting music programs and sports news to clients.

Investigation of applicants, he explained, was left to the telephone company, which he said had turned down between 50 and 100 would-be customers in recent years.

Attorney Wyatt tod the commission World Wide agreed to the principle of the phone company's inspection of applicants' premises but that its "judgment had recently become too arbitrary."

Lieut. Alexander Emerson, of Baltimore city's vice squad, testifying as a telephone company witness, said that a number of locations subscribing to the service had been raided by police.

Matusky declared that racing news broadcast by his company over its private lines did not include tips or probable odds but was of a general nature like information provided by direct radio and newspapers.

Winchester to Be Host To State 'Jaycees'

Winchester, Va., Oct. 23 (Spl.).—Gavin Binner, jr., president of the Winchester Board of Trade, has announced that the local club will be hosts at the next board meeting of the Virginia Junior Chamber of Commerce. The two-day session will be held at the George Washington Hotel here on November 10-11.

Binner estimated that the 17 clubs in the State would be represented by approximately 60 Jaycees.

Ex-Policeman Accused of 49 Burglaries

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—A former Baltimore policeman accused of committing burglaries while he was still on the force was charged today in 49 cases, and veteran officers said he was the most charged defendant in the city's history.

Police Magistrate Elmer J. Hammer fixed bail at $53,000 for Paul M. Maenhoudt, 43-year-old former patrolman, who resigned last June after 6½ years' service. Maenhoudt was held for grand jury action in 49 cases of burglary, attempted burglary and carrying a deadly weapon.

Detective Lieut. Frank Schmidt testified that the loot taken in the robberies ranged up to $11,000 in value, and totaled $27,658.01. Schmidt also said that Maenhoudt told of burglarizing places on posts adjoining his, and said the man admitted all charges but one, involving carrying a pistol.

Four policemen spent 11 hours writing the charges on the station and police court dockets.

The man admitted writing notes defaming the police department and left behind in some opened safes, and that he was the man who twice called the Baltimore Sun to inform the newspaper of burglaries already committed or jobs planned, Schmidt said. The caller identified himself on these occasions as "the phantom-burglar."

OPA Suspensions Entered Against 11 Va. Dealers

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Herbert T. Williams, jr., of the Richmond district of the Office of Price Administration, announced today that suspension orders had been entered against 11 Virginia firms.

The orders are, Williams said, the result of hearings held in Richmond by Daniel L. Bell, chief hearing commissioner for OPA, Williams said. All cases were described as involving alleged violations of rationing regulations.

Six merchants penalized for alleged acceptance of counterfeit coupons were:

Louis A. Rudman, Richmond, suspended from dealing in sugar for 90 days; Severine Alexander, trading as Philadelphia Meat Market, Hopewell, suspended from dealing in sugar for 60 days; Robert Griffin, of Tabb, suspended from dealing in sugar for 60 days; Robert J. Denson, trading as Bob's Place, Courtland, suspended from dealing in sugar for 90 days; W. H. Powell, Petersburg, suspended from dealing in sugar for duration of OPA controls, and J. D. Pierce, Dendron, suspended from dealing in sugar for the duration of OPA controls.

Police Training School Urged To Meet Expected Crime Wave

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—A training school for law enforcement supported primarily by the State but contributed to by counties and municipalities acording to the number of enrollees they have in the school was advocated here last night by Thomas M. Darnall, special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States.

Darnall, addressing Virginia police chiefs and other law-enforcement officers, also advocated insurance of $10,000 for law-enforcement officers, to be paid by the State or locality by which they are employed. He urged that all officers be equipped with .38-caliber revolvers of standard make and that such firearms and ammunition be furnished by the State or locality free of charge.

Courses Outlined

The Federal official, representing Attorney General Tom Clark, said the curriculum in the proposed school should include a course in Virginia law relating to arrest for search and seizure, crime scene searches, interviews, lip reading, photography, care and use of firearms, psychology, crime classification, deportment and contact with the public, evidence and courtroom procedure, physical culture and jujitsu.

Agent Melbourne Huff of the United States Secret Service reported that returning servicemen are bringing home from the wars souvenir guns which "you and I know within a short time will cease to be souvenirs and find their way into questionable channels and dangerous hands." Servicemen bring home sueh guns "innocently enough," he said, but a strong gun law is needed to combat the danger they threaten.

It is not the returning servicemen who will account for a post-war crime wave, but inferior civilians who cannot find work and readjustment in a competitive employment situation, declared Special Agent Harold Nathan of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Speed Increase Hit

Combat service, said Nathan, will have been "a character-building factor, instead of a factor to break down character."

Capt. W. L. Groth of the State police conducted a round table discussion on lifting of the wartime speed limit. Chief H. D. Woodyard of Arlington police, whose county governs its own speed laws, criticized the increased speed limit. It is now common to arrest speeders going "anywhere from 70 to 90 miles an hour," he complained, where before it was rare to catch a violator going more than 60.

Seek to Revive Bill

The association today considered reviving a proposed bill to require the penitentiary system officials to notify local police of prisoners' release and escape, and appointed a committee to ask help of the Governor's office in extradition of Virginia criminals.

Police chiefs from several communities complained at this morning's session of failure of penitentiary officials to inform them of the release of prisoners. Chief John Woods of Norfolk police and Chief E. H. Organ of Richmond said they had abandoned efforts to pass a bill through the General Assembly requiring penitentiary officials to furnish such information when prison officials agreed and promised to furnish it voluntarily.

This information has been refused, said the two officers, who indicated they will go back to the General Assembly this year with a bill making such information compulsory. The police chiefs' bill at the last session was nicknamed the "Gestapo bill."

Fruit Growers See Heavy Loss In Wage Bills

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 25. (Spl.).—Opposition to pending measures in Congress to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act was expressed this week before the House Labor Committee by Carroll R. Miller, this city, secretary of the Appalachian Apples Service (representing 467 grower-members) and National Peach Council, who declared the bills will impose increases on the growers' costs of production with no compensating program by which they can recover these increased costs.

Application of the bill's provisions to increase wages to a 65-75-cent minimum would result in a net loss of 21 cents a bushel to growers instead of the 3-cents-a-bushel profit of prewar years, he said, presenting figures compiled by the West Virginia College of Agriculture in a study on profits for the 1938-1941 period. The proposed increases, he said, "would injure or wreck the Nation's fruit industry."

Miller said the growers sought specifically exemption as agriculture under the proposed measure and the acceptance of the definition of agriculture in the Social Security Act rather than that of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

All the bills, he said, will continue the penalties now imposed by the FLSA on smaller growers and the penalties imposed on efficient, modern practices handling and marketing farm-produced foods. The act has, he said, to a considerable degree driven the fruit industry backward by forcing growers to discontinue packing for their neighbors and by penalizing cooperative packing houses.

The job classification specified in all except one bill (by Mrs. Norton) would promote feather-bedding in jobs, he said—would encourage the worker to feel he should do only one job, such as packing, or facing or heading.

State Food Board Seeks More Funds To Hire Inspectors

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—A larger appropriation for the dairy and foods division of the State Department of Agriculture to make possible the employment of additional skilled personnel and the expansion of the division's activities was the plea of S. S. Smith, director, in his annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1945.

Submitted to L. M. Walker, jr., commissioner of agriculture, the report pointed out that revenues of $140,015.15 were paid to the State general fund through sale of inspection stamps on stock and poultry feed, while the division's budget amounted to only $75,265, a difference of $54,750.15.

"We are constantly being beset with requests for work which we cannot do because of limited personnel and laboratory facilities. If a more liberal appropriation could be made, the revenue which this division collects could be considerably increased," Smith said.

More inspectors trained in modern dairy methods are needed, the director stated, pointing out that the milk and dairy laws enforced by his division represent a guarantee of safe milk and milk products for the entire State.

Baltimore-Cumberland Air Service to Start

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—Unscheduled flights from Baltimore to Cumberland and return will be started next Tuesday by the Columbia Airlines, O. L. Bonifay, president, advised Cumberland officials today.

Scheduled flights will be operated between Baltimore and Hagerstown. Only unscheduled flights are possible for Cumberland because of the local airport being in West Virginia and Columbia does not as yet have permission for interstate flights, Mr. Bonifay said.

Slaying Charge Faced By Maryland Hunter

Oakland, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—Herman Ray Fazenbaker faced a murder charge today in the hunting death of Logan Wilt of the Bear Hill section, State's Attorney Nell C. Fraley announced.

The prosecutor said the charge was preferred yesterday following Wilt's death at a Cumberland hospital from a wound he suffered the night of October 17 while out in the woods.

Top Bid Is $450 At Hereford Sale

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 25 (Spl.).—The top bid at the second annual breeders' sale of the Albemarle Hereford Association, held yesterday at Dodsberg Farm on the Garth rd., was $450, made by George Palmer of Riverdale Farm for Morlunda Realiss Sixth, a heifer consigned by Col. James T. Wilson of Harmony Gate Farm, Esmont, this county.

South Boston, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Howard Carwile, Independent candidate for Governor, invading the home city of William M. Tuck, Democratic nominee, spoke for approximately 45 minutes on the streets here today despite a drizzling rain and efforts to heckle him.

Carwile said the heckling came principally from a middle aged woman and from a group of high school boys who tried to drown out his words. He said he was nit in the back once with an apple but that he hardly felt it through his overcoat.

The Independent candidate, speaking to a mixed group of whites and Negroes who gathered around him, said "Tuck may be your master but he is not mine."

"Secretary Byrnes is fighting for democracy in the Balkans and I am for it in South Boston," he said.

The Independent candidate accused Tuck of "bootlicking a labor dignitary in Richmond," and asserted Tuck "cares no more for labor than a rude skunk cares about a dressed up preacher."

Taft Assails OPA Pay Envelope 'Propaganda'

By the Associated Press

The OPA came under sharp Republican fire yesterday for inclosing printed arguments on holding the price line in envelopes containing Army allotment checks.

Speaking directly to Price Administrator Chester Bowles at a Senate Banking Committee hearing, Senator Taft (R., Ohio) declared:

"You are propagandizing for continuance of OPA. You are trying to stir up all the people of the United States against the business people."

Bowles replied that the material merely said that inflation is a bad thing.

Is That Debatable?

"Is anything wrong with that?" he asked. "Is it debatable?"

Taft countered that the printed slips had no business in Army allotment envelopes and noted particularly they said consumers should refuse to pay a penny over price ceilings.

Senator Millikin (R., Colo.) remarked that the law setting up the Office of Price Administration "doesn't say to put throwaways in military envelopes."

Chairman Wagner (D., N. Y.) interjected that he was "glad" OPA did it.

Whereupon Taft hurled this accusation:

"The attitude of OPA today is that every business man is a crook until he proves otherwise—that if he is trying to make profits he is greedy."

Termed Fantastic

Bowles termed this an "absolutely fantastic statement."

The price administrator explained the workings of price control panels made up of some 200,000 volunteers who check on ceiling prices.

"It is absolutely un-American and contrary to law," Taft interjected, "for the Government to organize these people to spy on other people."

"They don't spy," Bowles replied.

The flareup came as other Senators, delving into postwar housing prices, heard an official estimate that 3,200,000 American families will be forced to "double up" in living quarters by the end of next year.

Urges Preventive Measures

John B. Blandford, jr., National Housing Administrator, supplied the estimate to a Small Business Subcommittee, along with an assertion that the pressure for housing threatens "an explosive and disastrous price inflation unless effective preventive measures are taken."

Blandford recommended that Congress authorize the President to establish "reasonable controls" over the price of houses when and where needed.

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), a member of the subcommittee who believes price ceilings will bring a gigantic black market, opposed this strongly.

Blandford asserted that if the prices of homes are allowed to rise still further, there is a serious prospect of a buyers' strike.

Indonesia Seen As Topic For Far East Talks

By the United Press

Some quarters here yesterday believed the colonial unrest in Indonesia is certain to be discussed at the first meeting of the Far Eastern Advisory Commission, even though it is not on the agenda.

The commission is scheduled to convene here Tuesday and the agenda, it was learned, has been limited thus far to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Japanese command.

One official said, however, that it was almost certain the Indonesian problem would be raised inasmuch as the Philippines delegate, Brig. Gen. Carlos Romula, is a foremost crusader for a "free Asia."

Romula made independence the goal for these colonial people at the San Francisco Conference. More recently, he advocated bringing together "recognized Malay leaders" before the end of the year in an "open meeting" to consider the formation of a Malay federation.

This would encompass the Philippines, Java, Celebes, the Moluccas, Sumatra, the Malaya Peninsula, Siam, Burma, Cambodia and the Indo-China states.

9100 Surplus Jeeps for Sale

Boston, Oct. 24 (AP).—Nearly 10,000 of those intricing, war born motor vehicles, jeeps, now are on sale by the Federal Government.

The office of surplus property of the Department of Commerce announces tonight that orders for 9100 of the fascinating buggies would be accepted until midnight November 6.

Sales will be made through 11 regional offices of OSP.

Among the jeeps to be sold, all transactions on an "as is" and "where is" basis, are 3000 new or rebuilt vehicles. Some, said the announcement, are in their original factory shipping crates.

Under priorities established by law, OSP explains, Federal agencies will have first claim on the jeeps, with States, counties and cities followin gin that order.

Honorably discharged veterans and those on terminal leave awaiting separation from the services, who have been seen certified as eligible by the Smaller War Plants Corporation, come next in priority.

A veteran, it was explained, will be eligible to purchase a jeep if he intends to use it in business or livelihood.

One Woman Told Another . . .

Mrs. Filbert's never was a war-time substitute to all the women who used it for 28 years.

When women discovered nylon was better than silk—they told each other. And when women found Mrs. Filbert had produced a superior margarine that was sweet, country-fresh and delightfully smooth—they told each other—so much so that Mrs. Filbert's Margarine was famous from Maine to Georgia . . . long before the war and the butter shortage!

These millions of women have discovered that Mrs. Filbert's Margarine is simply a better product. No large corporation owns it—no big advertising has ever backed it. No big interests have ever helped Mrs. Filbert. She, and now her sons, not only still make it, but they own and sell it, too.

Now Mrs. Filbert's Margarine is not only so good to eat but it's marvelous for baking, cooking, frying too. Mrs. Filbert believes if you try her margarine, you'll be able to tell, too, her business grew because her margarine is so much better.

Western Union And Truckers Fight Pay Bill

Representatives of the American Trucking Association and the Western Union Telegraph Co. joined yesterday in attacking the Administration's proposed 65-cent minimum wage bill.

John W. Lawrence, managing director of the trucking association, told a Senate Education and Labor Subcommittee that the bill would saddle the trucking business "with a labor cost it cannot meet while being confronted with an almost impossible situation in increasing its rates or prices."

The bill would raise the minimum wage rate from the present 40 cents an hour to 65 cents the first year after passage. It would jump to 70 cents the second year, and 75 cents in the third.

Peter T. Beardsley, association attorney, urged the committee to provide a one-year statute of limitations on the time during which an employe could sue for unpaid wages.

Frank Donner, assistant counsel for the CIO, opposed the suggestion. He said his organization favors a five-year statute of limitations.

T. B. Gittings, Western Union assistant vice president, asked the House Labor Committee meanwhile to exclude the company's messengers under 18 from the proposed wage boosts.

He said that 18.5 per cent of the company's employes are messengers and that the proposed bill would increase the messengers' total payroll $4,500,000 a year or 41.2 per cent. He said the messengers do not need the increase because most of them live at home and are not self-supporting.

Legislation Held Far Behind Times For Milk Control

Milk control legislation is 20 to 30 years behind the times, 85 dairy inspectors were told yesterday at the University of Maryland.

Maj. M. M. Miller, sanitarian for the U. S. Public Health Service, was main speaker at the second session of the three-day conference being held at College Park.

"To make improvements practical," Major Miller said, "we need the full enforcement of the regulations and to build up the staff of inspectors from its low wartime ebb."

The work of the university's extension service will be discussed at the closing session today by George Hyatt, university dairy specialist, and Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the extension service.

British Sailors Write Seeking Girl 'Pen Friends'

A couple of British sailors who have a lot of time to themselves have written a letter to Arlington County asking for he names of some American girls who will be their "pen friends."

The letter, addressed to the Mayor, Town Hall, Buckingham, U. S. A., reached the desk of County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan in Arlington yesterday.

The British sailors, who apologized for "making nuisances of themselves," explained that they were "interested in the ways of our great ally and would like to know more of your famed youth organizations . . . . writing to some one would break the monotony of our existence."

Before the war the United States imported each year about 4 million Persian lambskins from abroad, mostly Asia.

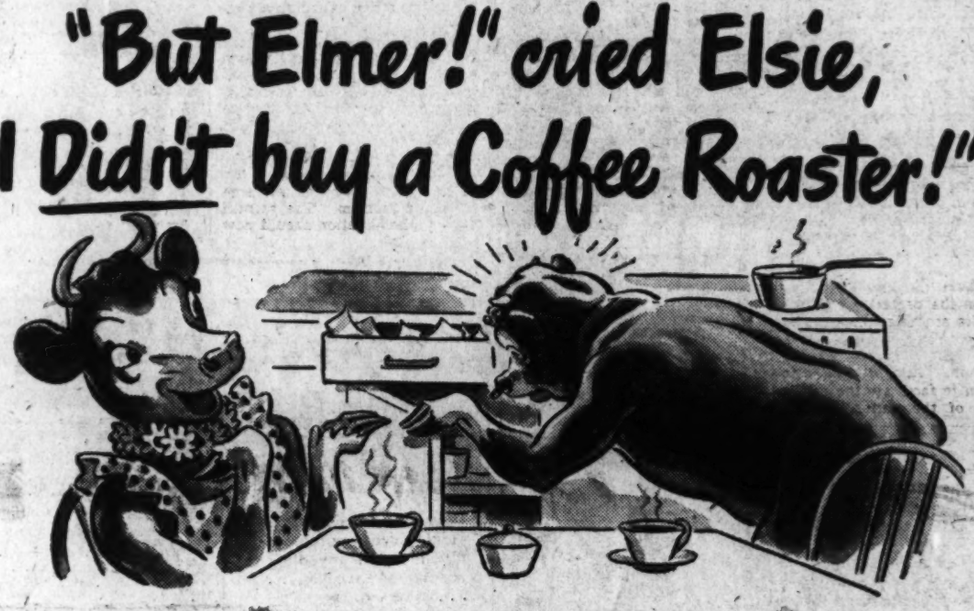
"But Elmer!" cried Elsie, "I Didn't buy a Coffee Roaster!"



1 The other morning, when Elmer came to breakfast, a strange thing happened. He took one sip of coffee and a blissful expression came over his face. Then suddenly he jumped up and started turning out the cupboards. "Elsie!" he snorted. "You've gone and spent our savings on a coffee roaster—that's what! Where is it?"

"But Elmer," cried Elsie, "I didn't—"

"Don't try to fool me," Elmer snorted. "I guess I know a cup of coffee made fresh from the roaster when I taste it!"

2 "Sure you do!" said Elsie. "But the roaster's at the Borden plant! They take fine coffees, roast, grind and brew them right away. Then, while that steaming coffee is at its fragrant flavor peak—zing!—they take the water out and lock that roaster-freshness in."

3 "All I do," Elsie went on, "is drop a level teaspoonful of this 100% pure coffee in a cup and add hot water—that roaster-fresh flavor comes right out!"

"You mean I could have another cup now?" said Elmer. "Just as soon as you tidy up in here," said Elsie.

Important: read the labels before you buy instant coffee!

There are two completely different types of instant coffee. One is the "cafe" type, sometimes labelled coffee "product." It is a mixture of coffee and other ingredients, such as dextrins, maltose and dextrose.

The other type—represented by Borden's—is 100% pure coffee, nothing else is added.

These two types of instant coffee cost about the same per cup on your table, (regardless of difference in size of jar or price at the store).

In taste, however, there is a difference. To find out which type you prefer, we suggest you try both.

Future Of Palestine

Pro And Con A Jewish Nation

IN HIS LETTER of October 20, Mr. Philip Marshall Brown, writing on the Palestine problem, lists, what seems to him, five "incontrovertible facts in this melancholy situation." One of these facts he says is that "The Balfour Declaration, as issued and subsequently interpreted by British governments, never contemplated a Jewish national state."

If Mr. Brown's contention is correct, then, altogether apart from the humanitarian aspect of the problem, it would appear that the Jews have no legal claim to Palestine. This is so important, in the present confused situation regarding the true status of Palestine, that in justice to your readers it should not go unnoticed.

On the 2nd of November, 1917, the British Government published a statement of policy, afterward known as the "Balfour Declaration," which said:

"His Majesty's government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object . . ."

Mr. Brown sets it down as an "incontrovertible fact" that this does not mean a Jewish state. That is, of course, his opinion. But what of the finding on this score of the British Royal Commission which visited Palestine in 1936? In commenting on the scope of the Balfour Declaration, the commission stated on page 25 of its exhaustive report:

"General Smuts, who had been a member of the imperial war cabinet when the declaration was published, speaking at Johannesburg on November 3, 1919, foretold an increasing stream of Jewish immigration into Palestine and 'in generations to come a great Jewish state rising there once more.' Lord Robert Cecil in 1917, Sir Herbert Samuel in 1919, and Mr. Winston Churchill in 1920 spoke or wrote in terms that could only mean that they contemplated the eventual establishment of a Jewish state. Leading British newspapers were equally explicit in their comments on the declaration."

And President Wilson, to whom the text of the declaration was submitted for approval prior to its publication, stated on March 3, 1919:

"I am persuaded that the Allied nations, with the fullest concurrence of our own Government and people, are agreed that in Palestine shall be laid the foundations of a Jewish commonwealth."

Such were the interpretations placed on the declaration at the time of its promulgation by men who were in a position to know because they shared in its formulation. And it was this obligation to facilitate the establishment of the national home that the British government undertook when it accepted the mandate over Palestine.

These are the inescapable facts. It is this policy to which the Government of the United States became committed when in 1922 the Congress unanimously adopted the Lodge-Fish resolution indorsing the Balfour Declaration and the mandate, and when in 1924 it entered into a treaty with Great Britain regarding Palestine. And no illegal "British White Papers," no protestations of expediency, and no secret understandings between heads of states can change it one iota.

Palestine is a desperate, burning issue to the million and a quarter Jews remaining in Europe today. They have seen six million of their fellow Jews brutally murdered in the slaughterhouses and crematoriums of the Nazis. Homeless and stateless, they look to Palestine as their only hope of mending their broken and shattered lives. Can we Americans stand by and see them barred forever from their own Homeland?

A. L. SHALOWITZ.
Washington, Oct. 23.

MAY I ASK the privilege of making a brief reply through your columns to the letter signed by Naum Avni and Esther Block as published on October 23? I do so not for the sake of controversial argument, but to help clarify the dangerous problem of Palestine.

1. The writers of this communication while assuming there would be guarantees under a Jewish state of the rights of all three great religions which regard Palestine with holy reverence at the same time demand a special privilege for Zionism as the dominant power. I urged in my letter of October 20 that Palestine be created as a state under international trusteeship in which no one sect, whether "Jews," Moslems, or Christians, should enjoy special rights of an exclusive character." What could be fairer than that?

2. The writers quote Mr. Loudermilk, an engineering expert, to support the claim that Palestine could maintain millions of refugees. Anyone who, like myself, may have traveled, all over Palestine on foot, horseback, automobile, and airplane surely knows that Palestine is a "pathetically small and arid country incapable of supporting a much larger population except by high industrialization." The Zionists are evidently willing to affront the religious susceptibilities of Christians and Moslems by converting the Holy Land into a country of engineering projects and factories. This seems to be nothing short of a "sacrilege."

3. The writers allege the attitude of Australia as evidence of the unwillingness of other nations to deal generously with the excessively difficult problem of taking care of refugees in the desperate confusion of the postwar world. I do not share this skepticism and believe that Jewish refugees can and will be cared for by wise and generous action of the United Nations. But this does not require the creation of another nation in Palestine.

4. The writers allege that the British government is irrevocably pledged to the establishment of a "Jewish commonwealth" in Palestine, but they do not quote any such statement. I know of none.

5. The writers seem to minimize the danger of a war in the Middle East over the extreme claims of Zionism. The painful facts of the situation should now convince them of this impending danger.

While sympathizing most deeply and sincerely with the agony of the Jewish people, I again would plead for a just solution of the Palestine problem which should do justice to all concerned.

PHILIP MARSHALL BROWN.
Washington, Oct. 23.

'Civil War' Phrase Is Opposed For Use in Va. UDC Catalogue

Delegates to the fiftieth annual convention of the Virginia Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, meeting in Alexandria yesterday voted to request the Librarian of Congress to delete the phrase, "Civil War" from the catalogue division's records covering the period between 1861 to 1865.

The convention urged designation, "War Between the States," be substituted.

It was pointed out that the Library of Congress sets the standard for cataloguing procedures of libraries throughout the Nation.

The convention, which has held sessions for three days at the George Mason Hotel and Confederate Veterans Hall, was informed that 909 Confederate soldiers remain on the pension rolls of the State.

Scholarship Awarded

The UDC scholarship of Vassar College in New York was awarded this year to Miss Anne Carter Ely of Richmond, a great-granddaughter of Gen. Robert E. Lee, the committee reported. Miss Ely is the daughter of the late Maj. Hanson Ely of the regular Army.

Mrs. Ferguson Cary of Alexandria, historian for the Alexandria chapter and the State UDC, was endorsed by the convention for election as national historian general in 1946.

A check for $1,576 was presented to the treasurer by Mrs. J. Howard Nuckols of Richmond, to complete the Virginia Division's pledge of $30,000 for helping maintain the Lee Mausoleum, Washington and Lee University, Lexington. The convention also voted to expand Lee Camp Room in Battle Abbey, Richmond, to provide a fireproof file for keeping records of the division.

State Officers Named

New State officers elected yesterday include Mrs. Lewis Littlepage of Norfolk, president; Miss Esther Barney of Fredericksburg, and Mrs. George Slater of Upperville, honorary presidents; Mrs. Nuckols, first vice president; Mrs. Lee O. Miller, Richmond, second vice president; Miss Beatrice Bland, Richmond, third vice president.

This Atomic Age and SURVIVAL

By ABE FORTAS
United States Under Secretary of the Interior

In this atomic age, if we cannot find a way to live together, we will surely perish together. The people of the world understand this. Their desires are simple, their vision undistorted by the complexities of nationalistic maneuvering. They want peace; they want a reasonable degree of freedom; they want a reasonable amount of food, clothing, shelter and security.

It is to these—the basic desires of the people—that we must look to chart our course. We must build our international relations not upon the shifting sands of the whims, ambitions, personalities and policies of governments, but upon the felt necessities of people. We must build our domestic policies, not upon the pressures and the pulls of special interests, but upon the welfare of all our people.

In this country, we have learned the hard lesson that it is impossible for half of us to be gloriously rich and the other half abjectly poor; that industry, for example, cannot flourish while agriculture starves. We have now to learn the equally difficult lesson that we as a nation cannot long prosper while the rest of the world is in despair.

America's Great Influence

Internationally, no nation in modern times has approached the veneration in which the United States of America has been held by the people of the world. We have been the big brother of all people. Our greatness and strength have been benevolent; our enormous power has been used, not to enslave, but to free.

We can use this great moral power and prestige of ours to unify the world. But we can do this only if we give the less fortunate people of the world hope . . . hope for a better life; hope that they will have food, economic opportunity, and freedom from fear . . . hope that they will soon achieve a decent livelihood on a self-supporting basis, without reliance upon the charity of others.

There is no people on earth who will long tolerate a condition stripped of hope. If we do not give them the basis for hope, they will necessarily turn elsewhere.

We must assure the decent people of the world that we will aid in their economic rehabilitation and progress. We must tell them that we will lend substantial economic and moral assistance to any democratic government committed to performing its part in the process of recovery, and dedicated to the ways of peace and civilization . . . and we must make good those assurances.

International Give-and-Take

We cannot play Santa Claus to the world; but neither can we afford to play short-sightedly. We must require and accept payment for our goods and services other than those supplied to alleviate starvation; but payment must be based upon ability to pay. That means we must accept real payment, in goods and services deliverable only as promptly as the debtor nation can furnish them without seriously impairing its own economic condition. The fundamental requirement for world survival is that from our abundance of material and skill, wisely offering and accepting trade and knowledge, we must help and teach other people to set their feet firmly upon the road to a better standard of living . . . the shortest road for us and them to lasting peace.

If we are not willing to do these things, we might as well again begin to polish our guns, tune up our tanks, planes and ships and devote our best minds, our manhood and treasure to the frightful task of preparing for the horrors of atomic death.

The Promise of Lasting Peace

On the other hand, if we can firmly establish within our own country the economic bases of democratic living, with full employment as a fully accepted requirement; and if we are willing to aid other countries to work and build for themselves stable economies, we shall realize the free and secure society which we Americans so greatly cherish.

The American people are equal to the task. We cannot fail in these objectives, for in this atomic age, the requirements for democratic living are the necessary ingredients for the preservation of civilized life on earth.

Leathernecks

A fuller examination of the compendious testimony of Navy spokesmen against a Navy-Army merger must wait upon a comment on General Vandegrift's evidence The Marine head pleaded for the retention of the Marine Corps as a separate unit. No plan of unification we have seen would do away with the Marines. This is our corps d'elite, with traditions which are responsible in great part for its fighting quality. The unification we have in mind is at the top—in staff, in procurement, in command, in organization, in training, and so on. All this could be done without damage to the identity of the Marines as such, or even different as well as separate training for them.

The performance of the Marines themselves may be cited in justification of an organizational merger. Take the situation at Okinawa. Both Marines and Army shared in the landings in this last great land battle in the war against Japan. Differently trained, they pursued entirely different tactics, and the cautious methods of the Army eventually called for support from the Marines. Hard feelings, as a result, were engendered, as was the case elsewhere. Perhaps there is reason for maintaining separate training for the Marines. They are commandos, or rangers, destined for the assault, and the mistake at Okinawa probably lay in mixing them with Army troops who were engaged in an operation for which they had not been properly prepared.

However, what is one to think of the compartmentalizing of the plans for the invasion of Japan? It is known that the first assault was to be a Marine undertaking. As such the Marines, probably with Okinawa in mind, insisted that it should be all-Marine; that is to say, with Marine air in support. The result might have been very unhappy. For Marine air was equipped only with medium-distance fighters, which, from the captured airfields on Kyushu, would have been unable to operate over Tokyo. If there had been unity of command, Army air, with its long-distance fighters, would have supported this initial landing. The loss of lives and advantage and time arising out of the divided command and of the personal and professional rivalries in the Pacific was immeasurable. It will occur again if any system short of a merger at the top is adopted.

Inside Russia

Speculations in the American newspapers about the state of Generalissimo Stalin's health are certainly no help to official relations with Moscow. Let us, in conformity with Secretary Byrnes' counsel, put ourselves in the other fellow's place. This we did when the reports of Stalin's alleged illness began to be published. We recalled what happened when Mr. Roosevelt was ill. It has since become known that he was in such poor condition when he went to Yalta that his closest advisers, not to mention the foreigners who saw him, were alarmed. But when this newspaper, in all innocence, reported this reaction in a dispatch from the Pan American Conference at Mexico, it was taken to task by those same advisers. Categorical assurances were given that we had been taken in by foreigners who had an ax to grind. The sad fact was that within two weeks of these assurances the President was dead. If the White House could be so disturbed, imagine the present disturbance in the Kremlin. If the White House could smell a plot, what about the Kremlin? As we say, our relations with Moscow are not improved by this public gossiping.

Yet we would be the last to admit that the newspaper reports about Stalin should not be published. What is wrong is the secrecy with which these matters are invested. When Mr. Churchill fell ill in North Africa, an announcement was made, and bulletins appeared daily from his bedside. The state of health of our statesmen is news, especially the state of health of a man who is the key figure in Russia, as Stali nis. There will, of course, be no such acknowledgment by the Kremlin, and it is the Kremlin's fault, therefore, if speculation is the rule.

It is to be hoped that the facts belie the persistent reports that are coming out of Russia. But there would be no wonder if Stalin were ailing. On no man has rested a greater burden during the war than on Stalin, not even Roosevelt. If Roosevelt had done a work comparable to Stalin, he would have been his own Chief of Staff and party manager as well as Chief Executive. Till we get a contrary impression, accordingly, we shall take it that he has felt the strain of his tremendous responsibilities. Other circumstances provide the same indication. In Russia's international conduct, one seems to detect a sort of loosening of central control, with the men on the spot carrying out individual policies, as if there were a loosening of the reins at the top and an anxiety on the part of the No. 2 men to be demonstrative.

Take, for example, the behavior of Zhukov, Zhdanov, Voroshilof, and Molotoff. The last named, while at the London Conference, backed and filled in a way that seemed to be at total variance from the decisions arrived at by Stalin himself at Potsdam. Voroshiloff in Hungary seemed to have forgotten the Yalta pledge on the Balkan countries when he abruptly ordered the small landholders party to form a common list with the Socialists and Communists for the forthcoming parliamentary elections. In Finland, Zhdanov, who has hitherto been conciliatory, is getting tough on the subject of war criminals. A trip to Washington was all scheduled for Zhukov in Berlin, but was canceled suddenly on the grounds of illness, though he is reported to be going about his business as usual. These are four salient Russians who are all in line for the succession. The inference is that they have been put not only on their own but also on their mettle. The danger implicit in these nascent evidences of several Russias is surely warrant for the hope that any illness from which Stalin may be suffering will be only temporary.

Atomic Tempest

Boston's scientists have added their voice to the general demand of the scientific world that they be heard on the atomic energy (May-Johnson) bill. There are 155 of them all told. It is a redoubtable list, headed by a man who occupies a niche of his own, viz, Dr. Karl T. Compton, head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Surely there cannot be any question about Compton's credentials. We said the same about the credentials of Dr. Harold U. Urey, Nobel Prize winner, who also had asked for a hearing. And we are particularizing the names because it is said that only the second-rate scientists are making the to-do about the May-Johnson bill. This is, of course, nonsense. Actually the authors of the hullabaloo read like a Who's Who of science. They have impressed the public, even if they have moved the Administration only to the extent of reopening the May Committee's doors sufficiently to admit three more scientists, making seven in all who have made an appearance.

This will not do. The May-Johnson bill exposes more heinous features with every reading. Hitherto we have stressed two aspects of it: the gag on science and public alike in respect of work and discussion on atomic energy and the neglect of the social and international implications of atomic development. What we now read is the hand of the military authorities. It is apparent that they wish to make the new commission their own creature. Note section 2 (d) which specifies that any active or retired officer of the armed forces may serve as a member of the commission, as administrator, or as deputy administrator, without prejudice to his commissioned status as such officer. In this connection section 3 (b) also catches our eye. It provides that "the deputy administrator shall at all times be kept fully informed by the administrator." In no other bill in our recollection has such a curious provision appeared. It is taken for granted that an administrator keeps his deputy informed except in the case of any Army-Navy setup, which is apt to be run on the basis of loyalty to service rather than on that of loyalty to the job. Could it be that an Army man is slated as administrator and a Navy man as deputy?

It is satisfactory to read that Senator Johnson, if not Representative May, has now seen the light. He says that the new special Senate committee, mentioned elsewhere, will have to rewrite the May-Johnson bill completely. No alternative is in sight. The whole matter should be reviewed from the standpoint that the cart has been put before the horse. The preamble stating, as it does, that the primary purpose of the bill is promotion of the national defense, is also an example of this invested approach. The atom bomb is a problem in our international relations, not in national research and development. So, we may hope, is the development of atomic energy for peace purposes. The cart seems firmly planted in front of the horse. Take, for instance, President Truman's message on military training. Much as we approve of the program, we feel that the prior item on his agenda should have been a call for an international conference. It is hardly conducive to peace and goodwill among nations to find the President acknowledging that an arms race is on and in the next breath sending a blunt message to Congress on the need for military training.

Television Growth

People who want to buy television receivers as soon as they are offered for sale should do so with the knowledge that a superior type of television may soon be perfected—and that the sets they now buy will not be capable of receiving it. We do not mean to suggest by this caveat emptor that we consider purchase of the present type of receiver unwise for those who can afford it. Good television is already a reality. But better television—television in a higher portion of the radio spectrum permitting pictures of greater clarity and detail, and with color—appears to be a firm promise of the future.

The promise was made more real and its fulfillment more imminent by the demonstration of color television given recently by the Columbia Broadcasting System. High-definition pictures, with full color produced by means of a mechanical scanning device were received in the CBS studios from a transmitter located in the Chrysler Building, New York, about ten blocks away. Enthusiasts should note that this transmission was beamed, not broadcast; that is, it was receivable only in a single direction. And the potentialities of the system for broadcasting color television with higher power over greater distances must still be explored and tested. Unforseeable difficulties may develop; and these will have to be overcome by the electronic engineers. No one can say with any certainty, therefore, how long it will be before the improved technique will be commercially practicable.

The Federal Communications Commission has indicated its faith in the eventual practicability of the so-called wide-band television in which CBS is now pioneering. At the same time, however, it has authorized commercial television to proceed at the already proven lower level of the spectrum. But it has allocated so few frequencies to this service as to make development of it on a full-fledged, genuinely competitive national basis virtually impossible. It would have been neither fair nor feasible, of course, for the FCC to have forbidden television operation at the present stage of development on account of the hope, or expectation, of a higher stage of development later on. Nevertheless there is a danger that heavy investment in television at its present stage on the part of broadcasters and the public may impede the switch to the improved technique when that becomes possible. The FCC can best guard against this by letting the public know that the receivers it buys in the next year or two may quickly become obsolete and by insisting that research and experimentation be pressed by the industry with the utmost vigor.

Meet The Emergency

No surer sign of the approach of an emergency in industrial relations has appeared on the horizon than the polls among automobile workers showing overwhelming sentiment in favor of going on strike. If half a million employes in the motor industry leave their jobs, even for a temporary period, reconversion will be critically hampered. And a pattern of coercion and probably violence will be fixed for many other industries to follow. Obviously the Nation cannot afford such a disastrous interruption of its adjustments to peacetime. That outcome is likely to be avoided, however, only by a bold and forward-looking national policy in which the public demand for peaceful settlements will have an opportunity to manifest itself.

It is true that negotiations between General Motors and the UAW-CIO are going forward, and both sides still hope to avert a strike. But the negotiators appear to be miles apart and to have no common meeting ground on which to settle their differences. The union demands a 30 per cent increase in pay. Management responds that it is impossible for the industry to support such a heavy increase without substantially raising prices and adding to the inflationary spiral. What are the facts? The public does not know. We are bombarded by propaganda from both sides, but are left without a foundation of fact on which intelligent public opinion may be crystallized.

This deficiency can be supplied only by Government. We suggest, therefore, that the President appoint an emergency board to investigate the basic economic conditions underlying the dispute, to make a public report in not less than 30 days recommending terms for settlement of the dispute, and to use its good offices to secure acceptance of those terms or a compromise stemming from the same source. This is approximately the procedure that is used in the settlement of railway labor disputes which threaten to interrupt transportation. It is the formula which the President would doubtless be forced to apply in the event of a prolonged crisis in Detroit. We think he can render the Nation as well as industry and labor a service of inestimable value by using it before the walkout begins.

Of course, the Government could not undertake to settle all labor disputes by this means. The emergency board technique must be reserved for genuine national emergencies such as that now threatening. In these instances the appointment of fact-finding boards is a practical means of bringing governmental influence and public opinion to bear upon situations of national concern. We think the President should be given statutory authority to appoint such boards whenever industrial disputes assume national importance. But the present situation will not wait for enactment of a law. It demands action now. Since the proposed board would be advisory, the President's authority to appoint it can scarcely be questioned.

One other reason why we think it is important for President Truman to act boldly and resolutely is that the Administration's labor policy at present appears to have fallen into a sort of stalemate. A new approach is needed. Government should be a more positive element in effecting major settlements than it has been to date. Mr. Truman has a great opportunity to take the lead in this situation, to create a proper atmosphere for his forthcoming labor-management conference, and to swing public opinion back of a constructive long-range policy on industrial relations.

WAR CASUALTIES

Casualties of war are the living and the dead under foreign skies they lie forever lost to sunshine and to grief and gold like a bright day on the farm and love under the trees.
A crippled dependence on crutches.
Sight lost for all time
to dazzle of light to ripple of stream . . .
Sad casualties of war . . .

And there are those that never fully know their loss except in quick moments of remembering on still nights suddenly emptied of laughter.

Call For Action

By Ernest Lindley

Full Employment Bill

ON SEPTEMER 28, the Senate passed the full employment bill by a vote of 71 to 10. Since then the bill has rested in the House Committee on Expenditures, apparently almost forgotten until President Truman, on Thursday, sought informally to get some action.

The opposition in the House is based on the same misgivings and misunderstandings which originally aroused opposition in the Senate. These were overcome to the satisfaction of all except a handful of Senators by the amendments adopted on the floor. The most important of these originated with Senator Taft, whose approach to economic and financial questions is thoroughly orthodox. With the acceptance of these amendments, Senator Taft voted for the bill, as did a majority of the Republican Senators, in addition to a majority of the Democrats.

The original bill caused more of a furore than its substance justified. Its very name is misleading. It does not, and could not, guarantee or assure full employment. It is a less important bill than many of its supporters and original opponents said or implied, but that does not mean that it is wholly without importance. It is certainly too meritorious to be buried in a House committee.

THE BILL would require the President to submit annually a set of estimates of employment and production during the ensuing fiscal year—a national economic budget, as distinct from the Federal Government's fiscal budget. It would require Congress to set up a special joint committee to give the national budget a continuing study.

Those provisions were the essence of the original bill. Everything else in the original bill and in the Senate version is trimming.

Enactment of the bill would compel, or at least encourage, the President and Congress to examine annually the condition of the whole national economy. The national economic budget would provide the background for all legislation of an economic or financial nature.

It probably is impossible to forecast exactly a year or 18 months ahead what the state of the national economy will be. But various trends can be noted and brought together into an over-all prospectus which will be a better guide than the Executive and Congress usually have had in the past.

The President, of course, could submit such a national budget without legislation expressly requiring or authorizing it. President Roosevelt included such a budget in rudimentary form in his regular fiscal budget at the beginning of 1945. But there is no regular machinery for drawing up such a budget or, what is more important, for weighing it in Congress.

NEITHER the Executive nor the Congress can act intelligently without reference to an over-all analysis of the economic situation and outlook. Yet both in the past have often acted on the basis of their general impressions of current conditions. It is incredible that Congress should not wish to be better informed.

The original bill was attacked on the ground that, in effect, it endorsed particular economic remedies for unemployment. Some said it meant that the Government had to provide a job on the public payroll for every unemployed person. Some said it meant a tremendous public works program to relieve unemployment. Some said it would have committed Congress to the compensatory spending theory generally. The sponsors of the bill in the Senate denied all of these allegations. The Executive and Congress retain full freedom of action with respect to the measures they may adopt at any time to deal with unemployment or to head it off.

The amendments adopted in the Senate were intended to remove all doubt on that score. If there are any remaining doubts in the minds of reasonable men, they could be extinguished by very slight changes in wording, without impairing the real values of the bill.

Government Workers

A story in The Post of October 18 reports that Government workers are lagging below their "quota" in their Community War Fund contributions. President Truman directs agency heads to increase the pressure upon employes to contribute, and Chairman Butler of the drive suggests that Federal workers fail to appreciate the significance of the fund.

In the interest of the fund, and in simple justice to Government employes, I submit that attention should be focused on the most important and most neglected factor in this situation—the recent cut averaging 22 per cent in Federal workers' take-home pay. Even prior to this reduction, the great majority of Federal workers found it hard to make ends meet on their salaries in this expensive city. President Truman himself described Federal pay scales as "pitiful" and "inadequate." Here is the obvious cause of the lag in the fund drive. Here is reflected the stake of Washington as a community in supporting "a decent salary scale for all Federal Government employes," again to quote President Truman. Neglecting Federal workers' own pay problems and blaming them for the lag in the fund drive is both unfair and useless.

Washington Calling

How To Counteract Intolerance

THERE ARE HEARTENING signs that Americans in various parts of the country are waking up to the dangers of racial hatred and are taking positive steps to combat it.

On the Pacific Coast, a small minority is trying to fan the flames of prejudice against Japanese-Americans returning to their homes from so-called relocation centers. In several instances, Japanese-American war veterans have been victims of hoodlumism directed at the Nisei. This is true in spite of the fact that there are almost daily accounts of the outstanding heroism and bravery of the Nisei in Italy and in the Far East.

Not long ago, Mr. and Mrs. Kay Sakamoto returned to their California home to find that their house had been burned to the ground two days before. One of the Sakamoto sons was killed in action and two have been decorated for bravery. Within a few days, Californians started to raise a fund to help rebuild the Sakamoto home.

The Spokane (Wash.) Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars refused membership to Richard Naito because of his Japanese ancestry. But when veterans at Baxter General Hospital at Spokane heard about it, they got together in an indignation meeting.

They formed a new organization—the Veterans Committee for Equal Rights. Members of the committee who leave the hospital for various parts of the country form new chapters in their home communities.

THE GOAL IS "to promote the maintenance and extension of democracy under the Constitution of the United States of America by insuring equal social, political and economic rights for all present and former members of the armed forces and Merchant Marine, regardless of race, color, creed or extraction." Chairman of the new organization is Pvt. James Carpenter of Clackamas, Oreg., who won the Silver Star in the Pacific.

From forthright Gen. "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell came a blast against "bar fly Commandoes" guilty of persecuting Jap-Americans.

In an interview in Roundup, the soldiers' newspaper in the Burma-India theater, Stilwell suggested that soldiers form a pickaxe club to protect Nisei veterans.

"We cannot allow a single injustice to be done to the Nisei without defeating the purposes for which we fought," Stilwell said.

Not nearly enough is being done to counter the racial tensions which many believe are growing rather than diminishing with the war's end. Education is one answer.

A HARD-HITTING editor of the West Coast, Frank Clarvoe of the San Francisco News, is not content with hewing to a vigorous line on his editorial page. He is speaking to audiences around the State on the menace of intolerance.

Recently the editors of Look magazine put together a book of pictures with text by Wallace Stegner under the title "One Nation." An excellent editorial job, it shows how primitive prejudices work against Jews, Catholics, Filipinos, Nisei and other minority groups. We are, Stegner points out in his text, one Nation, and any attempt to unravel the skein of many-colored strands will destroy the whole.

But education is a slow process. Some observers believe there is need for Federal legislation which would prevent outbreaks of violence such as occurred after the last war.

Two brothers charged with dynamiting the fruit-packing shed of a Japanese-American were acquitted by a California State jury after their attorney argued it was a "white man's country." Later they were tried in Federal Court in Sacramento on charges of unlawful possession of explosives and conspiracy to break a Federal law. But the jury seemed to regard this as a rather slight pretext for bringing the men to trial, and they were acquitted again.

Federal law offers little or no protection to minority groups when violence threatens. States been sensitive to any invasion of the police field.

But lynch mobs are not deterred by State boundaries. Perhaps in the troubled transition period we will need Federal barriers to check the merchants of hate and violence.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Aid For Gov't Jobless

The jobs of 2500 WPB employes were terminated on September 30. By October 31, 1800 more will be unemployed. To date, less than 25 per cent of these workers have been able to obtain other jobs. Many have been promised positions in Federal service, but cannot be hired until Congress has approved the postwar budgets of the governmental departments. Many of these workers do not have any means of support to carry them through this reconversion period.

The suggestion has been made that these persons withdraw their retirement funds. They can, if they have been working for the Government for less than five years, but if they do so, they will suffer a "break-in-service" which means that they cannot be rehired in a comparatively simple method, but have to be reexamined and reclassified by the U. S. Civil Service Commission and they have to return the money withdrawn before they can start work.

Therefore, the only answer to this problem is—unemployment compensation for Federal employes. Persons in private industry have had unemployment insurance for years and it is a sad reflection upon Congress for it to disregard President Truman's recommendation that Federal employes be given the same protection.

Representative Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, told a delegation of WPB employes that they should return to their homes. "Jobs? Plenty of them." But those mentioned by Representative Doughton were in industries paying sub-standard wages and would mean a complete waste of education, experience and ability of persons who have done a good job as public servants.

Representative Doughton is worried about Government revenues and expenditures; the House Ways and Means Committee members are willing to reduce corporate and personal income taxes but the Kilgore-Foran bill, which gives unemployment compensation to Federal employes, has been pigeon-holed.

LILA O. POLLIN,
Chairman WPB Board, United Federal Workers of America.
Washington, October 5.

Maryland Taxes

I am a taxpayer who isn't happy over the news in the October 18 paper that Maryland's taxes are to be substantially reduced. You see I know at what cost to necessary State services these so-called savings are being made—health, welfare and school needs are just not going to be met in proportion to our ability as a State to meet them. Our legislators should remember, and the Governor, too, that when States fail to meet these obligations the Federal Government is more and more called upon to do so.

Our "savings" in taxes are going to be costly—don't let us fool ourselves. Our children will pay in poorer educational opportunities than they might have had and surely we will pay in our self-respect.

Argentine Speaks

As an Argentine citizen, I wish to make some remarks on the information from Buenos Aires published in the edition of the 18th of October in your important newspaper.

1. The C. G. T. (General Confederation of Workers) never had 1,500,000 of affiliates, as reported. At most, their membership, in their best days, was around 500,000.

2. The great majority of Argentine workers do not support Peron in spite of his violent demagogy. It is true that he obtained the support of the C. G. T. through the government machinery and the pressure of the police: Persecuting and jailing the authentic labor leaders, bribing others, suppressing free union ballots, etc. It is definite that in spite of all this maneuvering, unions such as the Construction Union, which in your report appears as supporting the regime, are bitterly opposed to it.

3. If Peron and his henchmen have succeeded in paralyzing a great part of the activities of the country, those who have suffered this dreadful regime know how this has been achieved: Through terrorism, reprisals, police oppression, and the aid of their lumpen-proletariat.

4. Said your correspondent: "Peron brought with him an entirely new regime." That is too much to say. It is not possible to understand the Argentine problem if one centers it on one single man, no matter how strong he may appear to be. The Argentine situation is the result of a more complex system. This is the pro-Nazi system, which has organized in Argentine, with its characteristic efficiency, one of its more important strongholds.

'Hole At The Top'

I have been following the exchange of letters to the editor about your editorial "Hole at the Top." It seems to me that Sergeant Densford's letter, a rehash of stock arguments against the claims of labor, is an inadequate reply to Mr. Atterlee's original letter. What matters to me, and I suppose to many Post readers, is the anti-democratic, ultra-reactionary source you picked for a quotation in your editorial. I have been for a long time an admirer of your brilliantly written editorial page, although I have been frequently disturbed by the discrepancy between the editorials on foreign affairs and those on domestic matters; and I have been shocked by this revelation of the shady intellectual company you have been keeping. However, until all the evidence is in, I shall cling to the charitable explanation that you used the "all sail and no anchor" simile without being aware of its original context.

Labor's Power

By Mark Sullivan

Lewis An Example

POLITICS IS THE mechanism by which, at any time, whatever class or group is most powerful in a country, has its will over the country as a whole, by means of influence upon government.

By that definition, what group is most powerful in America today? In world history, governments of various countries have at different times been dominated by the church, the army, business, landed interests.

Today, in America, the dominant group is the labor organization and labor leaders, and their dominance composes a new era in American political history.

SUCH A STATEMENT should be accompanied by proof. The proof exists, amply. Yet stating the proof is awkward. For it happens that the most concrete evidence of the emergence of the power of labor during the past 10 years lies in the relations between government and Mr. John L. Lewis. At the present moment the labor group that most exercises power on government is not that of Mr. Lewis; it is CIO. And the method used by Mr. Lewis differs from that used by CIO. But it is the case of Mr. Lewis that provides the most completely documented proof.

In 1935 President Roosevelt helped Mr. John L. Lewis to found a new labor organization, CIO. The following year, unions under Mr. Lewis contributed some $600,000 to the Roosevelt presidential campaign fund.

During this early period the relations between President and labor head were intimate. In 1937 Mr. Roosevelt veered away from Mr. Lewis. During a Republic Steel strike he said, of both company and strikes, "A plague on both your houses." Quickly Mr. Lewis retorted, "It ill behooves one who has supped at labor's table, and been sheltered in labor's house, to curse with equal fervor and fine impartiality both labor and its adversaries . . ."

During 1941 Mr. Lewis conducted a strike in several soft-coal mines. His principal demand was a closed shop. Five times President Roosevelt asked Mr. Lewis to end the strike. His letters were worded in a spirit of patient pleading: "I am therefore, as President of the United States, asking you . . ." "For the third time your Government, through me, asks you . . ."

About the issue, Mr. Roosevelt said, "The Government of the United States will not order, nor will Congress pass legislation ordering a closed shop."

The case went to the Defense Mediation Board. The board decided against Mr. Lewis, nine to two. Mr. Lewis heaped scorn on the decision, and on the board. The CIO members of the board resigned. The board was disrupted, it ceased to exist.

President Roosevelt then appointed three arbitrators. One was Mr. Lewis, another a coal operator. The third was a Government official, given leave of absence to serve as arbitrator. He sincerely believed that, on the basis of a previous precedent, Mr. Lewis should have the closed shop. Mr. Lewis got it.

AFTER WE WERE in the war, President Roosevelt said, "I am unalterably opposed to strikes during wartime." And again, "I say to all miners . . . the production of coal will not be stopped . . . There can be no one among us, no one one faction, powerful enough to interrupt . . ."

During the war Mr. Lewis conducted three strikes. In April, 1943, President Roosevelt told the miners they were striking "against the United States Government itself," and appealed to them to "resume work immediately." The miners remained on strike until after Mr. Lewis directed them to return, "for a period of 15 days beginning Tuesday."

The War Labor Board directed Mr. Lewis to sign a contract with the coal operators. Mr. Lewis said he would not. WLB appealed to President Roosevelt to require Mr. Lewis to comply. At a press conference President Roosevelt said, with a manner of wringing his hands, that there was no way he could compel Mr. Lewis to comply.

Mr. Lewis got his way with Government mainly by personal force, directed against an Administration which disliked him as a person but would not fight him as a labor leader, because it shared labor's purposes and was dependent on labor politically. The method used by CIO is a combination of friendly alliance and constant pressure on the Administration.

The power of labor is not so far complete. It is exerted successfully only in the Administration. In Congress, CIO has comparatively little power.

For New Auditorium

How much longer must we residents of Washington, the Nation's Capital, have to depend upon the DAR to provide us with an auditorium? Constitution Hall has always been a makeshift, unsatisfactory as a concert hall and completely useless as far as opera and ballet are concerned. A modern and well-designed auditorium run by the District government, and free from racial discrimination the Watergate concerts have been, should be the very first item on the agenda for postwar construction in Washington.

'Mildred Pierce' Stars Joan Crawford in Drab Melodrama at Earle

AS BITTER AND UNSYMPATHETIC in the nature of its characters and content as any screen play that has come along in recent months, "Mildred Pierce," presented yesterday for the first time on a Washington screen at the Earle Theater, restores Joan Crawford to public view after a protracted absence in a role that is unfortunately lacking in warmth or any of the other gentler qualities it presumably was intended to possess.

Eve Arden

Adapted by Ranald MacDougall and Catherine Turney from the novel by James M. Cain, unread by this desk, it comes to the screen as a harsh and unhappy melodrama of a considerable scope that ranges from filial transgressions through the emotional vacillations of a thwarted mother and the treacherous operation of business duplicity and the double-cross to murder.

It begins, according to accepted formula, with the murder of Monty Beragon in Mildred Pierce's beachside retreat and then, by the familiar means of police inquisition and flashbacks of the "events leading up to the crime," relates the whole sordid story of the waitress who ran her tips into a fortune and her domestic concerns into disaster.

I am inclined to the view so persistently expressed by her daughter that Mildred Pierce was not much of a mother. There was a vaulting ambition and grim determination about her, to be sure, and perhaps a specious sort of courage, but little of the true understanding of those patient and tender attributes of mind and heart that make the world go round. She was hard as nails; so hard that even her enormous affection for the hopelessly spoiled and ungovernable Veda expressed

Struggling up the economic, if itself with a tincture of iron. not the social, scale from what some look upon as a menial occupation to ownership of a fabulously successful chain of restaurants, Mildred exercised a consistently disastrous judgment and unfathomable willingness to let expediency be her guide.

One Mistake After Another

Divorcing the finely stanch and patient Bert Pierce at the first stroke of misfortune, only to return to him in the end, Mrs. Pierce married the thoroughgoing cad and unconscionable rogue from whom she bought her first piece of property, only to leave him, remarry him and finally see him lying murdered by a hand the police would be very happy to indentify.

In the shadow of this major mystery, it is being revealed that Mr. Beragon was not above replacing his wife with her daughter, already absolved by dubious means of a bit of blackmail that netted her a tidy $10,000; that that young woman is not worth the devious efforts of her mother to save her from herself, and that Mildred's business adviser is as much crook as the helpful friend he pretends to be.

To run the Pierce cup of misery over, and for no other apparent reason Mildred's youngest daughter dies just before her highly profitable restaurant business collapses about her head through the cold-blooded chicanery of her "best friends."

The manner of the picture's preparation and the ruthless nature of its playing give rise to the reluctant belief that it was primarily fabricated as a sop to lovers of the lurid and sensational, rather than as any well grounded examination of the fundamentals of human living.

Viewed from this premise, the film no doubt will attract a wide and enthusiastic patronage. Neither in production nor in casting has it been stinted, and Michael Curtiz's direction has omitted few of the tricks aimed at morbid interest.

Chilly and Competent

Granted that Miss Crawford's title role is aimed less at the heart than at the easier of the tensions and excitements of murder and mystery, it is given a skillful and coldly effective interpretation by the star. Mildred both came up and went down the hard way, and Miss Crawford provides that sort of portrayal of the sort of mother which, one suspects, most women would prefer not to be.

Ann Blyth, in her depiction of one of the screen's most dispicable brats, transcends her mother in the realization of every repellent quality in a woefully distorted nature. If Miss Blythe had it in mind to etch the character of Veda as the most violent and hateful psyehological hoodlum the cinema has evolved, her efforts have been crowned with complete and incontestable success.

Zachary Scott runs a close second in the achievement of a peculiarly pernicious bit of portraiture in his deft exposure of precisely how craven a fellow Monty Beragon really was. Jack Carson has been favored with only a slightly more admirable part as Wally, the oily operator, who would rather swindle than solace his most valuable client. Wally, in the adroit hands of Mr. Carson, has the partially saving grace of humor to gloss over the raggedness of his moral sense.

The brightest spot in the picture is to be found wherever Eve Arden is, in the role of Ida, Mrs. Pierce's breezy business manager, who sheds trouble as effortlessly as an old raccoon coat does hair. Bruce Bennett, as Bert Pierce, gives the picture its single symbol of rectitude, excepting, possibly, Moroni Olsen's believable impersonation of the chief of detectives.

Down Wrong Alley

Were not its approach from the wrong direction—a purely personal point of view, you understand—"Mildred Pierce" would rank well among the less subtle of the melodramas.

Even so, check your finer sensibilities at the door and I dare say it will meet the requirements of an expendable couple of hours.

At yesterday's first performance, the Earle's bill of supplementary attractions was incomplete. To be shown later in the day and through those that ensue, was the "Hollywood Victory Caravan" two-reeler, enlisting the services of Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Humphrey Bogart, Barry Fitzgerald, Betty Hutton, Alan Ladd, Barbara Stanwyck, Diana Lynn, William Demarest, Joe Carioca and his Latin-American music, Carmen Cavallero and his orchestra, Robert Benchley, the U. S. Maritime Service Training Station Choir and I don't know how many others.

They have been assembled primarily to afford 20 minutes of rip-snorting entertainment and, through that, to sell a large volume of bonds in the Victory War Loan campaign. They probably will do both.

The new newsreel will be found both timely and interesting.

Good Story, Anyhow!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 25.—Did you know that a Californian named John Montgomery is believed to have flown a plane in 1883, long before the Wright brothers? I did not. Neither did Bill Wellman until he ran across the story some weeks ago. He became so enthusiastic he got Bryan Morgan to work with him on it for a picture. They dug up facts from the San Diego Chamber of Commerce and found many people thought Montgomery was a little touched, but the priests at Santa Clara had other ideas. They built a shack for him, where he experimented for 10 years. You might say he had the first flying school, because working with him were a German, an Irishman, an Italian and an American. The little girl who worked the bellows in the church became his wife. A year and a half after they were married he died. His wife, a brother and two sisters are still living. The love and human interest angle of the story is as great as his development in flying. Wellman, as you know, was the heart, soul and director behind "GI Joe."

Maureen O'Hara

Korda Retiring From M-G-M

Alexander Korda, whose last English picture is "Vacation From Marriage," starring Robert Donat and Deborah Kerr, is retiring from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He's been head of Metro's English group for more than five years. Illness was given as the reason for his retirement. . . . Lieut. Comdr. Doug Fairbanks, jr., is all set for "Adventures of Sinbad," a swashbuckling tale like the sort of thing his father did better than anybody else on the screen. Walter Solezak and Maureen O'Hara are also in it . . . Jack Haley's having to get up early these mornings. Part of "Bad Man's Territory" is being shot on his ranch, and he's out there to see that his cattle get their share of close-ups . . . Jackie Cooper arrived from Pearl Harbor with the Halsey fleet.

Nice Gesture From Buffalo

Joseph J. Kelly, Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., took time out to suggest that Charles Morati, tenor, who's directing their Civic Opera Company, would be perfect for Enrico Caruso. "During his last Los Angeles appearance," wrote Mayor Kelly, "your Times headlined him 'Double of Caruso Heard at Grauman's Chinese'." On the mayor's letterhead is this slogan: "Buffalo, the City of Good Neighbors" . . . Esther Williams was met in Mexico City by their great star, Cantinflas, who brought so many flowers to the plane she and two companions couldn't carry them. They're giving her a time down there. She wrote after seeing her first bullfight that it was better than any football game. I wonder whether she'll feel the same after she's fought her first bull.

Star Rave by a Star

Cary Grant really put on a rave about Virginia O'Brien's singing for Admiral Halsey at the Cocoanut Grove. Said he, "Gosh, if I could pry her away from Metro and book her in England, she'd be a riot." When Ray Bolger danced with an imaginary partner, Grant said, "I don't understand why he's not the biggest star here. There's great talent!" No doubt about it, and when Ray does "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" on Broadway with Oscar Serlin, then puts it on the screen, he'll be one of our greatest. It's just too bad he's had to wait so long. . . . The Andrews Sisters are wasting no time. They're recording six of their top tunes in Russian for Russia. . . . This did it to me. "Some Must Watch," a best selling novel, is now "The Silence of Helen McCord."

Pen Slipped, Not Gracie

Poor Gracie Fields. In an interview from Australia, she said she was "tired," and it got out somehow that she was "retiring." If I know my Gracie she won't retire until she hears Angel Gabriel blow that trumpet. . . . Irene, Metro's designer, and husband, Capt. Eliot Gibbons, joined the Gary Coopers at Averill Harriman's lodge in Sun Valley for some shooting. Bet, Coop, and Rocky are the sharpest shooters. They proved they were really expert in one of my movie shorts a couple of years ago. . . . Louis B. Meyer has nine camera crews at the race track every time The Busher runs. They cover every part of the race, so he can see if she's ever fouled. . . . We have the cutest little schemes here for getting what we want. All agents were after newcomer Nancy Guild, but she wouldn't sign. They sent their handsomest employes to take her dining and dancing, but not until she danced with Mike Levee's young son did she sign up with Papa Mike. . . . When Marlene Dietrich was introduced to Jerome Zerbe some years ago, she said, "What a beautiful name! How ever did you think of it?"

Husband Threatens Wife, 13, and Baby

Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 25 (INS).—Shirley Vaughn Holland, a bride at 12 a year ago, was a mother at 13 today. She has a baby daughter, weighing just under 6 pounds.

The 23-year-old father, an former serviceman, was held in the county jail. Sheriff's deputies said he threatened to kill his infant daughter, his wife and his mother-in-law.

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Oct. 25.—The atomic bomb now is at least a thousand times more powerful than the one which destroyed Nagasaki. The unused bombs are buried somewhere in this country, but they won't go off because they have no detonators . . . One of the best-known scientists who worked on the bomb says they no longer have to be dispatched by rockets or planes—that if an enemy leaves enough of them, with time fuses, in vaults, apartments and hotel rooms at key spots throughout America 40 million lives can be lost in one day.

James Stewart

All the Broadway and ballet choreographers have organized into a Choreographers and Dance Directors Guild, and are about to present their demands to the League of New York Theaters. It was organized by a group which included Jerome Robbins, Agnes de Mille and Helen Tamiris. Massine, Tudor and Balanchine are among the members . . . Admiral Joseph Farley, chief operations officer for the Coast Guard, will succeed Admiral Waesche as commandant, Admiral Waesche will retire shortly, and Farley is his choice . . . Col. Jimmy Stewart may return to the screen as a member of the Capra-Briskin independent film production company.

Some playwrights were discussing the writing of true dialogue and told of the time when George M. Cohan and Ring Lardner collaborated in writing a baseball play. Cohan spent many days writing what he believed was the conversation which takes place in a dugout during a ball game. Lardner, a veteran sports writer, read Cohan's dialogue and said: "George, this isn't realistic. This isn't the way a ball player talks in the dugout" . . . "What does he say?" Cohan asked . . . "All a ball player keeps saying," said Lardner, "is 'Git a lead.'"

Frank Sinatra is trying to buy the contract of Tony Janiro, the fighter . . . After January 1 the enforcement powers of the War Labor Board—concerning the labor-pirating in which employers paid more than the ceiling-wage for help—will be turned over to the Collector of Internal Revenue. The tax collector won't recognize a deduction for the extra, illegal wages paid by employers. This will involve millions of dollars in revenue for the Government.

Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, the former President of Mexico, who died in Mexico City last Friday, once exiled himself from his country after he left office. He thought his successor, Cardenas, wanted him killed . . . A few years later Calles decided to return, that he no longer could stay away from his homeland. He chartered a plane and then, with a group of armed, loyal guards, he returned to his house at night. The guards were deployed, ready for action. Calles retired to sleep peacefully that night, confident that his secret return home was successful. In the morning the guards noticed a uniformed man approaching. They held him prisoner and took from him a note he was carrying, addressed to Calles. The bearer was a mailman. The note was from President Cardenas, welcoming Calles back home and inviting him to the palace.

Col. Charles Poletti, now home from Italy, will rejoin his law firm . . . Too many of the guests saved Billingsley's cards to present to traffic cops when they're stopped.

In Toots Shor's, Ed McKeever told Ted Husing about last year's Notre Dame-Army game, and of the pep-up speech he gave his Notre Dame men before the game. "This is the first time my father will miss seeing one of my teams play," McKeever told his players. "He's sick in bed and couldn't come. But he'll be listening to the broadcast. I'm not asking much from you men—just win the game for him. The life of that sick man depends on this game. Go out and win this for my pop" . . . In the last quarter, when Notre Dame was trailing by more than 40 points, McKeever sent in a sub who, in the huddle, told the players: "We're a lot of confused, bewildered guys, but we can be positive of one thing now—McKeever's old man sure is dead."

For the first time in 25 years of attending every Broadway premiere and sitting in the front row, Mrs. Katzenberg will miss the opening of "Beggars Are Coming to Town," on Saturday night. She's recuperating from a broken nose . . . William Hells, the New Orleans sportsman, is expected to succeed Spyros Skouras as head of Greek War Relief . . . Rex Harrison, en route to Hollywood is anxious to do "Young Man With a Horn." The British star is a trumpet-playing jive-fan . . . The Waldorf-Astoria and the Hotel Trades Council have submitted their differences to Commissioner Mulrooney. Both sides agreed to abide by his decision.

Gypsy Rose Lee's newest acquisition is a collection of 24 matching stone-martens. She received them from an admirer who had told her: "You can have anything you want." He accompanied Gypsy to the furrier, where the precious stone-martens were placed on the floor for her selection. Gypsy chose 24 matching ones, and told the furrier: "Put 'em together. I want to see how they look around me" "Don't be silly," her benefactor suggested. "Why don't you just lie down among 'em?"

Recoveries Cut War Casualties 429 During Week

The Nation's war casualty toll took another downward turn yesterday for the fifth consecutive week.

The new total for the armed forces is 1,069,632, including 922,645 for the Army and 146,558 for the Navy. This is 429 under last week, a decrease accounted for largely by recovery of men previously listed as missing.

A breakdown on Army casualties this week and last week:

Killed, 216,966 and 208,966; wounded, 571,330 and 571,277; missing, 18,565 and 19,892; prisoners, 115,784 and 122,547.

Navy figures: Killed, 55,696 and 55,633; wounded, 80,256 and 80,238; missing, 9287 and 9573; prisoners, 1119 and 1506.

Of the Army prisoners, 107,457 have been exchanged or returned to military control.

French Protest Destruction of Nazi War Materiel

Paris, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—France has protested vigorously reported Allied plans to scuttle the German navy and destroy German war materiel, it was disclosed today. Complaining that replies to previous representations had been evasive, a spokesman said they would be continued until a definite answer was received.

The Times of London on October 10 reported a plan to sink the German battle fleet in the Atlantic. Later the government received information that United States forces had started to destroy captured German war materiel, including planes.

Does she want to finish her education? Or get married? What was the hardest part of military life? Would she join the Army again? Read Newsweek's behind-the-scene account of what GI Jane is thinking, and planning for the future.

French Troops Expand Drives On Indo-Chinese

Saigon, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—French troops advanced north and west of Saigon today to split Annamite resistance forces near the capital, after terrorists in Saigon attempted to burn the police station and started fires in the Chinese section.

French troops landed at My Tho, center of resistance for the Viet Minh or Indo-Chinese nationalist group, to begin mopping-up operations.

Troops of the Second French Armored Division under Col. E. L. Massu and Maj. E. T. Dronne occupied Tan An, 30 miles from Saigon, while a French force from the north drove southward.

Butter Point Cut Puts Jinx On Marmalade

Marmalade and apple butter will begin a swift disappearing act from hotel and restaurant tables Sunday with the lowering of points on butter from 12 to 8 points per pound.

The local hotel and restaurant associations both said butter will be served with either two or three meals a day, and at private dinners.

Robert Wilson, secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, added that "Unfortunately, a very limited number of owners who went overboard in buying butter in anticipation of complete end of butter rationing have used too many red points and must stick with marmalade for the next few weeks."

Prepared to Meet Demand

Local butter wholesalers said they had a sufficient supply to meet increased demands after Sunday. A number of Washington restaurants and hotels some weeks ago refused to serve butter at noon and evening meals until the OPA reduced the point value to eight points.

Meanwhile, a national OPA spokesman said that the District is slated to receive 750,000 pounds of the 80 million pounds recently released by the Army. That butter will begin to arrive early next month.

The spokesman also explained that butter rationing will continue at its reduced point value for some time because: (1) butter production this year is 11 per cent behind last year's, and, (2) this is the yearly 'low' season for butter.

Lush months will not resume until spring.

He added that sudden end of butter, fats and oil rationing during this "low" might give bakers, candy manufacturers, and other large consumers a chance to gobble up all supplies, leaving the dinner tables empty.

The university's total war fund contribution was $2836.73 with more than $600 being raised by the Diamondback contest. There were 19 candidates, one selected by each sorority and dormitory.

One man admitted guilt and three others were acquitted of illegal Sunday liquor sales in Trial Magistrate Court, Hyattsville, yesterday.

Edgar P. Baldwin, 54, of 3208 17th st. ne., Washington, was fined $150 for selling liquor on Sunday, September 30. He was arrested at Kline's Tavern, Mount Rainier, by Prince Georges County police.

William D. Norton, 54, of 3111 Upshur st., Mount Rainier, who was charged with illegal sales at the same establishment earlier the same afternoon, was acquitted, as was John W. Kline, 64, of Mount Rainier, who had two charges of permitting the Sunday sale of liquor lodged against him by county police.

Alfred Jablonka, 40, of 3913 Oglethorpe st., Hyattsville, was acquitted of a charge of illegal Sunday sales at Otto's Grill, Colmar Manor. A State's witness, Jack O'Brien, alias Thomas O'Neill, of 3408 Perry st., Mount Rainier, failed to appear in court. Judge Arthur P. Owens said he intends to order O'Brien's $100 bail forfeited.

Two other cases, growing out of visits to liquor dispensaries September 30, will be heard in Hyattsville court Monday.

Alvin T. Brown, 30, of 4312 Newton st. and George D. Williams of 3701 Bladensburg rd., both of Colmar Manor, are charged with illegal Sunday liquor sales at the Hi Boy on Baltimore blvd., Colmar Manor.

UNO Unit's Work Nearly Completed

Landscaping Plan Adopted For Hospital

A master plan for landscaping and beautifying the grounds of the Suburban Hospital at Bethesda, Md., has been adopted by the board of trustees, Arthur B. Solon, superintendent, announced yesterday.

The plan has been prepared by Ed Stock, jr., of Stock Brothers Nurseries, and includes use of trees, shrubs and plants to present a restful appearance for the public, visitors and patients. It calls for special treatment of the 56-foot areas between the patients wings as well as in front of the hospital and the grounds between the main hospital building and the nurses' home.

It is hoped that garden clubs and other organizations as well as individuals will contribute plants and shrubbery or sponsor planting of trees, shrubs and plants such as those called for by the plan.

Superintendent Solon reported that there was an average of 69 adult patients and 16 new-born babies daily in September. There were 230 patients admitted, plus 46 babies born at the hospital. There were 79 surgical operations performed, 109 persons were treated in the emergency room and out-patients made 121 visits to the clinics. The 43 volunteer Red Cross nurses aids gave 705 hours of service and the 55 junior volunteers gave 586 hours of service in the dietary and nursing departments.

Tuberculosis Unit Urging Big Expansion

A "great expansion" of Virginia's program to curb tuberculosis was urged yesterday by Mrs. Norma Davies, president of the Arlington Tuberculosis Association.

"Here in Arlington," Mrs. Davies said, "we need to expand our health education program to reach specific groups as well as the general public. Our rehabilitation program and patient counseling service will help speed recovering and reestablish patients as independent members of the community."

Mrs. Davies pointed out that Virginia has a death rate of 46 per 100,000 from tuberculosis, or sixth of the highest among States all over the country. In order to lower that rate, she said, local communities must cooperate in such measures as expansion of X-raying services for all employe groups as well as for individuals and provision for adequate facilities for diagnosis, treatment and cure of tuberculosis patients.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights
Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Next Month's Tire Quota to Remain Same, 2,500,000

The number of passenger tires allocated for rationing in November is the same as for this month—2,500,000.

Announcing this yesterday, OPA said the heavy truck tire quota also is unchanged at 250,000.

The November allotmnet of small truck tires, however, is down to 350,000 casings, as compared with 500,000 this month. OPA said this reduction resulted from a heavy demand for tires for new trucks and a smaller production increase than anticipated.

Despite OPA Administrator Chester Bowles' statement earlier this week that the end of tire rationing is "in sight," the agency's announcement today said the "passenger tire shortage continues to remain most acute, with demand far exceeding available supply."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THIS columnist recently proposed that we begin thinking a little more about the Sermon on the Mount in our international relations, and among other thinges establish a departmtnt of peace.

It was suggested that along with the Department of War and the Navy Department, we set up as our first line of defense a department of peace to promote the idea that the only alternative to the atom bomb is to teach the world and ourselves that we must get along with each other. This is the only alternative to war, because if there is another war, we face the end of civilization.

One aftermath of this idea is significant. It occurred in the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives the other day when its members voted appropriations for the State Department.

It happens that the nearest thing we have to a department of peace is the Department of State. That organization is by no means perfect, and might not be ideal to operate a department of peace. But its new chief, Jimmy Byrnes, has some good ideas and is working hard to establish new bureaus for spreading goodwill and helping peace.

He is trying to carry on the ideas of the Office of War Information which furnished propaganda to newspapers, aimed toward a better understanding of the USA. Byrnes is also trying to raise salaries. For years State Department officials have struggled along on starvation wages. This is partly the fault of the wealthy career clique which wanted to keep wages low and thus operate a closed shop for themselves. So Secretary of State Byrnes is trying to raise diplomatic wages as the first step toward having alert diplomats guard the peace front.

However, when Byrnes' appropriation bill got up before his old friends in Congress the other day, the House Appropriations Committee slashed it to ribbons. They particularly cut the new agencies patterned on the general idea of a department of peace.

Worst knifer of Byrnes' peace-front plans was Committee Chairman Clarence Cannon from Truman's home State, Missouri.

Meanwhile the War and Navy Departments are still able to get just about all the money they want.

Navy Nurse

EARLIER in the week this column told how Navy Capt. W. J. Slattery, commander at Banana River, Fla., had used Navy planes on various junkets to arrange for an admirals' "clam bake" on the British Bahaman island of Cat Cay.

Captain Slattery is anxious to have enlisted men remain in the Navy and recently suppressed an issue of the base newspaper, Banana-Peelings, because it contained opinions—by men and junior officers against remaining in the Navy.

It now develops that Captain Slattery has other reasons besides airplane pleasure rides for liking the Navy. He also has had the use of an athletic specialist as a glorified nursemaid to take care of his children.

Athletic specialists are generally used for rehabilitating veterans who have suffered loss of legs or arms. But Captain Slattery used Second Class Athletic Specialist Robert Beal to take care of his two sons all summer. Now that school has started, athlete Beal works only half-time.

However, he is on call by the captain either morning or afternoon which means that he is practically on full-time call. Beal has at his disposal a pick-up truck on which he has a No. 1 priority. Also at the children's disposal are the facilities of the boat house and the rifle range where the athletic specialist takes them shooting.

If other Navy men could get similar privileges perhaps they'd stay in the Navy too.

Why Men Leave Navy

WORRIED about the failure of men and officers to remain in the Navy, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal recently put out an order to naval separation centers to interview the next 100 reserve officers who came up for discharge. The result showed bitter resentment on the part of reserve officers against the Annapolis clique. Here are some typical interviews quoted verbatim:

"The only reason I would join the Navy again would be if I were starving."

"It's mighty late for the Navy to try to sell itself to reservists."

"I think the officers of the regular Navy are grasping, pushing and self-centered."

"The attitude of the majority of Annapolis officers to reservists is that they are to be endured only for the time being."

"The Annapolis grads should cast aside their childish attitude."

Perhaps the bitterest comment came from a reserve officer who in civilian life had been a professor at the University of North Carolina. When interviewed by the discharge officer as to what he thought of the Navy, he replied:

"One skipper, a regular Navy officer, was drunk and missed his ship. I was forced to take the ship into battle. Was anything done to him? No. He was an Annapolis graduate."

Exit Happy Chandler

DOWN in Kentucky, politicians have been on edge for weeks waiting for Senator Happy Chandler to resign from the United States Senate and devote his full time to being baseball commissioner. Happy has announced that he would resign, but hasn't fixed a definite date.

As a result, every time a letter bearing Chandler's frank on the outside arrives at Governor Willis' office, it is pounced upon and immediately opened. Happy has sent a lot of less important mail to the Governor, and apparently gets a lot of fun over this suspense. For the other day he sent Governor Willis a letter, and on the outside of the envelope he wrote: "This is not it."

However, the date has now been fixed. Turbulent, happy-go-lucky A. B. Chandler, who caused Roosevelt to make 17 rear-platform speeches through the length and breadth of Kentucky to prevent him from defeating "Dear Alben" Barkley in 1938, and who caused all sorts of New Deal money to flood the State to aid Barkley, will resign from the seat which he once coveted, effective October 31, 1945.

Congress Absenteeism

MOST Washington visitors are anxious to see Congress in session. However, the majority come away scratching their heads, wondering how Congress gets anything done at all.

The other day, two hours after the session got under way, the galleries of the House of Representatives were moderately crowded. However, the floor was as devoid of Congressmen as Speaker Rayburn's head is barren of hair.

Rayburn, seated in the presiding officer's chair, seemed a little ashamed of the poor attendance. Out of the 435 members of the House, exactly five were in the chamber, three Republicans and two Democrats. One of the Democrats was speaking on the full employment bill. Congressman Claire Hoffman of Michigan was heckling him. In a far corner another Republican sat whispering with Senator White of Maine, GOP leader, who had come over from the Senate for a visit. The other Republican and the other Democrat sat reading the afternoon papers.

This, of course, is the way Congress has functioned for generations and somehow or other they seem to get things done.

Independence, Mo., City Hall

President Truman's home town, Independence, Mo., was quite elated over the recent report that its postoffice is eligible to be modernized and enlarged through the expenditure of $390,000, if Congress approves a requested 193 million dollars for Government buildings. But that isn't the main thing Independence is hoping for.

Actually Independence wants a new postoffice. Such a grant would solve two problems—one for Edgar C. Hinde, postmaster, who wants adequate facilities to handle the postal business he says has tripled during the past few years. The other problem is some place to house the town's city administration.

What Mayor Roger T. Sermon and the city fathers need is a new city hall. For some time, therefore, Mayor Sermon has had his eye on the old postoffice building as a city hall. And the mayor, who several years ago bolted the old Pendergast machine to organize his own Democratic Party in rural Jackson County, usually gets what he wants.

Chinese Chemist Killed by Fumes From "Discovery"

San Francisco, Oct. 25 (U.P.)—Army and civil officials sought today to identify the gas which killed a Chinese scientist and poisoned his assistant in their recluded laboratory.

The victim was Dr. Wong Lin, 36, German-educated chemist. An autopsy disclosed he was asphyxiated by fumes from a "chemical solvent."

His assistant, Lum Sing, 37, fought for his life under an oxygen tent. Physicians said his lungs were "burned" as if by chlorine or a similar substance.

A friend reported Wong told him the day before the accident that he had just completed an "amazing new discovery in the field of chemistry."

P-47 Hit 500 M.P.H. Over Year Ago

Farmingdale, N. Y., Oct. 25 (U.P.)—The War Department today authorized announcement that an experimental model of the P-47 Thunderbolt fighter plane more than a year ago exceeded a speed of 500 miles an hour in a test flight.

Republic Aviation Corp., manufacturer of the Thunderbolt, said a flight on August 4, 1944, over a test course here before Army observers exploded the theory that conventionally powered aircraft could not attain a 500-mile an hour speed in level flight.

Col. Luther Harris has returned to P-CA as vice president in charge of engineering and maintenance after serving four years with the AAF. During Colonel Harris' military service he was one of the key Army men responsible for establishing the Fire Ball Route, the longest airline in the world, which whipped high priority war materials from America to India.

Col. James D. Henry has returned as assistant to the president of P-CA. He entered service in 1942 as a first lieutenant and early this year attained the distinction of being decorated twice in one day. He received the Legion of Merit and the Cluster to the Bronze Star Medal from Lieut. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton of the First Airborne Army.

Bethlehem's Net Boosted By Tax Credit

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Bethlehem Steel Corp. reported today net income of $7,761,667 for the quarter ended September 30, or $2.05 a common share, against $8,041,682 for the preceding three months, or $2.15 a share, and $6,621,944 for the like period of 1944, or $1.67 a share.

The company had an unusual provision for depletion and depreciation and for amortization of wartime emergency facilities of $49,894,478, against $10,336,990 for the second quarter and $13,013,205 for the same period of 1944.

Interest and other charges also increased to $7,138,855 (for refinancing and redeeming certain bonds), against $1,126,022 in the preceding three months and $1,804,040 for the third quarter of 1944.

Tax Credit Lifts Net

After deducting these items net income before provision for taxes was a deficit of $27,218,333. But the company also had an income tax credit of $34,980,000 growing out of the amortization, so the ultimate net income was $7,761,667, or $2.05 a common share.

Net income for the nine months ended September 30 was $23,499,258, or $6.23 a common share, compared with $19,788,325 for the similar period of last year, or $4.99 a common share.

Directors declared the usual dividend of $1.75 a share on the preferred—payable January 2 to holders of record December 7—and $1.50 on the common, payable December 1 to holders of record November 5.

Eugene G. Grace, president, said the steelworkers' union would have an answer to its demand for a $2 a day wage increase after a meeting in Philadelphia next Monday.

He had no other comment on this except to say: "We can't pay $2 a day more and keep our prices as they are."

Employment Slumps

Grace said the average number of employes had declined from 251,000 in the third quarter of 1944 to 221,000 in the second quarter of 1945, 195,000 in the three months ended September 30, and finally to the current force of 177,000.

He added that orders on hand amounted to 546 million dollars, against 995 million dollars for the same period of last year, and said the decline was attributable to (1) cancellations of war contracts, and (2) the usual changes in billings of shipbuilding work.

Grace said the orders on hand were the lowest since the second quarter of 1940, when the total was 289 million dollars.

Job Bill Compromise Hinted After White House Conference

By the Associated Press

President Truman went to bat yesterday for his "full employment" bill, but he didn't hit a home run.

Two key legislators he called to the White House told him they will try to speed some type of legislation to help provide jobs for all.

They reported, however, that there is little chance for passage of the measure requested by Mr. Truman, which states that all able-bodied Americans wanting work are entitled to an opportunity for employment.

The President received this report from Representatives Manasco (D., Ala.) and Whittington (D., Miss.). The former is chairman and the latter an influential member of the House Expenditures Committee, where the Administration bill has been bogged down ever since it was passed in amended form by the Senate a month ago.

Neither Is Specific

Questioned by a reporter, neither Whittington nor Manasco would say specifically that a compromise bill is in the making. The prospect of such a move appeared likely, however, on the basis of their comments.

Manasco declared:

"Mr. Truman was very anxious to get the bill approved. But I told him I could not support legislation giving asurance of a job for everyone at Federal expense.

"I told him the pending measure would require a lot of amending.

"Also, said that either by new legislation or under his reorganization powers expected to be granted soon he could improve the Governments' statistical setup in order to provide the figures needed to plan for a program of full employment.

"In addition, we talked about arranging for a better program of coordinating public works projects to help give jobs to all who want them.

Annual Job Budget Planned

Manasco's reference to the statistical studies was in connection with the plans for an annual "job budget" on which to base plans for any additional employment needed.

Whittington said:

"I hope we will be able to approve some type of a constructive employment bill, but it will not be the one pending before the committee. We cannot base an employment program on the deficit spending theory."

Meanwhile, reports reaching Capitol Hill indicated the President plans to call in several more committee members in an effort to speed action on the bill.

Still Is Hopeful

Legislators receiving this word also said Mr. Truman would agree to some compromise, although he is still hopeful of getting the bill through as introduced by Representative Patman (D., Tex.).

These informants added that the President believes the Senate version of the measure is "watered down" too much. It specifies merely that all able-bodied Americans able to work and wanting work are "entitled to the opportunity" for employment, and provides that the Government shall aid full employment only if such action is consistent with Federal "needs, obligations and other essential considerations of national policy."

In the bill being considered by the House group no appropriations are authorized, but it enunciates a Federal policy of supplementing private enterprise, when necessary, to insure jobs for all.

Lew Ayres Back From Pacific

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ASOLDIER SPEAKS OF PEACE—Sergt. Lew Ayres, former film actor, sits before an organ aboard the ship in San Francisco that yesterday brought him back from 22 months' duty in the Pacific. The star of "All Quiet on the Western Front," he began his military career in a conscientious objectors' camp and later transferred to the medical corps. Serving as assistant to a chaplain throughout the Philippine campaign, he became noted for his disregard of danger in rescuing wounded under fire. Thin and grey, the 36-year-old Dr. Kildare yesterday said he had no definite plans but wanted to teach men to get along with one another in these critical years. "I want to find a direct way of serving humanity," he said

Opening of Legion Fair Now Set for Today

Official opening of the Victory Reconversion and Industrial Fair, sponsored by the District Department of the American Legion, which was postponed yesterday because of rain, will take place at 1:30 p. m. today on the American University campus.

The fair which will run through Sunday, will include two horse shows daily, competitive events and industrial exhibits. District Commissioner John Russell Young will officiate at today's opening ceremonies.

Truck Owners Refuse Union Pay Demands

With Washingto nfreight deliveries sharply curtailed by a walkout of 300 local teamsters, the District Trucking Association, in which 11 of the 12 strike-gound firms hold membership, last night reaffirmed its refusal to grant the union's wage boost demands.

"Our position is unchanged," Joseph C. McGarrahgy, counsel for the companies, reported after a meeting with management representatives. The strike of truck drivers and helpers affiliated with Local 639, AFL Teamsters International Union, became effective at midnight Wednesday.

At the same time Commissioner of Conciliation Richard Goodrich reported efforts to bring the disputing parties together for a conference remained unsuccessful. "I've talked t oboth sides, and each is waiting for the other to move first," he declared.

Operations at Standstill

Meanwhile, operations of a dozen major District trucking firms were virtually at a standstill, as strikers threw all-day picket lines around companies, warehouses and terminals here.

Freight continued to flow into the city by train, but over-the-road truck deliveries were slashed substantially. Trucking officials said union drivers carrying merchandise from other cities into Washington were stopping en route and refusing to bring their loads into the Capital.

At the Pennsylvania Railroad freight station, all regularly scheduled deliveries of freight were halted by a strike of drivers of the Eagle Transfer Co. Pickets permitted trucks operated by the Government and large department stores to pass into the station and make their own pickups.

Freight Congestion Predicted

A continuation of the strike would pile merchandise high in the terminal, officials predicted. Deliveries to homes were virtually nil.

The Baltimore and Ohio freight yard was unaffected by the stoppage. The Jacobs Transfer Co., chief hauler for the B. & O., signed a contract with the union several weeks ago. The Southern Railway also was unaffected by the walkout, it was said. Railway Express, major delivery firm for Southern, was not involved in the strike.

Large business establishments were not immediately hurt by the stoppage. The majority operate their own trucks and consequently were in a position to pick up freight ordinarily handled by the strike-bound firms.

Small Firms Hard Hit

Individuals and small firms were hardest hit. Small merchants did not express immediate concern but said a lengthy tieup would seriously affect their businesses. A spokesman for local men's wear establishments labeled the situation "serious."

The walkout, called at 9:05 p. m. Wednesday, was not expected to tieup food delivery. Most wholesale establishments operate their own trucks, it was said, and the majority of retailers do not get their merchandise direct.

The basis for the strike was a wage controversy involving union demands for hourly wage increases ranging from eight cents for drivers to 11½ cents for helpers. Four companies cited in the original strike notice have signed union contracts and are not involved in the present walkout. Firms named were Calvert and Rogers, National Trucking Co., Smith Transfer Co. and H. H. Preston Co.

Strike-bound companies were listed as follows: Associated Transport, Brook Transport, Elliot Motor Lines, Baltimore Transfer, W. T. Cowan, Capitol Motor Lines, Davidson Transfer, Eagle Transfer, Eastern States Trucking, Kane Transfer, Universal Cartege and Liberty Express.

Candidate Has Health Plan For Schools

A complete health plan for Virginia schools has been advocated by J. Maynard Magruder, Democratic candidate for reelection to the Virginia General Assembly from Arlington County.

Speaking before the Parkway Citizens Association, Magruder declared he is a "strong advocate" of the correction of children's physical defects at private expenses when possible, but at public expense if necessary.

Magruder called for a revision of State health laws to provide a complete physical examination of every child entering school. The Arlington legislator said that he is strongly in favor of a program founded on sound educational principles with adequate facilities to get results. Such a program, he said, should include university and college public health courses, approved by the department of health and the education department; public health summer courses for teachers and the creation of a separate school health bureau in the department of health.

Strike Limits Airline Trips Out of District

American Airlines Service between Washington and Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis, was on a limited basis last night due to a strike by maintenance workers in the last three cities.

Four flights between Washington and Chicago were being terminated at Cincinnati last night. Flights to St. Louis via Chicago were canceled. Flights to Detroit via New York, and from New York and Chicago, which were terminated early yesterday, were restored last night on a "limited basis" according to American's New York office.

The restrictions on American's traffic hasn't affected other airlines operating out of Washington. All reported they were operating their flights at full capacity.

The strikes started with American's trans-Atlantic affiliate, American Export Lines, Inc., at New York City, and now affects 577 employes of both lines. When Export's men struck workers in American also quit, to prevent "shuttling of work" from Export shops into American shops.

The company stated that the strike was not restricting overseas flights by Export, which began with an initial flight Wednesday to Foynes, Ireland, and London. These fights will continue thrice weekly, the company stated.

The strike affecting American yesterday was termed a jurisdictional strike. Three unions are trying to represent the men as bargaining agents. They are the United Automobile and Aircraft Workers, affiliated with CIO, the Transport Workers Union, also a CIO affiliate and the Airline Mechanics Association, an independent union.

The strike was termed "illegal" by Michael J. Quill, head of the CIO Transport Workers Union, who authorized members of his organization to cross the picket lines and return to work.

UAW leaders termed the strike on Export lines authorized, but the sympathy strike by American's employes as unauthorized.

At the same time a strike by 2000 maintenance workers at the Miami shops of Pan-American Airways System was called by the local unit of the transport workers there. Officials last night stated that a termination of that walkout was in view after extended negotiations.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

They staged the great Uline Arena holdup the other night when they held up Sammy Angott's hand at the finish of his 10-round fight with Danny Kapilow. It was a bare-faced robbery of Kapilow who won 8 of the 10 rounds and then had the decision snatched from him by two astigmatic judges and one referee whom you may have.

Povich

It was apparent something was screwy even before the decision was announced. Jimmy Lake, who gathered up the judges' slips preliminary to announcing the decision, winced when he read 'em. He gulped a couple of times, too, and was still in a daze when he saw his duty and did it, announcing Angott the winner.

All that Kapilow did was belt Angott's ears off, knock him down twice with clean shots to the chin, button up one eye good and finish up so far in front he is leading in the first four rounds of next month's rematch. To vote Angott the decision, the judges and referee had to be both capable and incompetent simultaneously—incompetent to judge a fight and capable of reaching such a sorry verdict.

The round-by-round scoring of Referee Charley Reynolds and Judges Jimmy Sullivan and Dr. J. A. Trigg is a study in inconsistency. Apparently they don't even know the District Boxing Commission's scoring rules. Reynolds scored the first round in Angott's favor, 9 to 8, a novel conclusion inasmuch as it is explicit that the winner of any round must be credited with 10 points.

When the commission's scoring rules were adopted by Heinie Miller it was clear-cut that the man scoring a knockdown be credited with the round by a margin of at least five points. But after Hapilow dropped Angott in the second round, he got only a 10-7 margin from Trigg and Reynolds and when he knocked Angott down in the eighth the best he got from any of the trio was a 10-8 advantage.

At no time was Kapilow off his feet or close to it, but both Reynolds and Sullivan credited Angott with wider margins in certain rounds than they gave Kapilow when he was scoring knockdowns. Reynolds says he took the first round away from Kapilow because of a low punch which automatically deducts two points. Reynolds' decision on fouls is supposed to be binding on the judges, but Trigg scored the round for Kapilow, 10 to 9.

The customers didn't like the decision a bit. They howled and stomped and booed, and if the District Boxing Commission wasn't impressed there's no hope. The boxing business here has been crying for a new deal in judges and refrees for years and we never did understand just what was so sacred about a referee or a fight judge. At each fight it's the same old faces in the judges' row.

Sullivan was there all right, but there's doubt about which fight he was watching—the one in the ring, or the brawl in section C, third row. He gave Angott seven rounds with one even. Sullivan has figured in some other beauts, but the Boxing Commission keeps assigning him as a judge with great regularity.

The judges certainly aren't judging fights for the money that's in it. They get only $5 per show. The District Commission ought to tilt their wages and then hire judges who are worth the new scale. "Washington decisions" are becoming famous in a distressing sort of way, and the Boxing Commission ought to be unhappy about it.

There's no excuse, though, for the lack of better referees. A main bout referee is well paid here. He knocks down 10 per cent of the commission's take, up to a $100 maximum. Reynolds picked up 60 bucks for his work in the Angott-Kapilow fight, and on performance he was overpaid. It's such a sour boxing situation here, that the wrestlers at Turner's Arena drew more fans than the Uline fight on the same night.

Reynolds is the referee who counted Buddy Walker out in the Arturo Godoy match that was last summer's farce. Walker went down, holding his groin and claiming he was hit low, despite the fact Godoy had struck nothing but a pose. Reynolds defended his 10-count by saying Walker was hit with a right to the chin. He forgot to explain that Walker was wearing his chin below the belt that night.

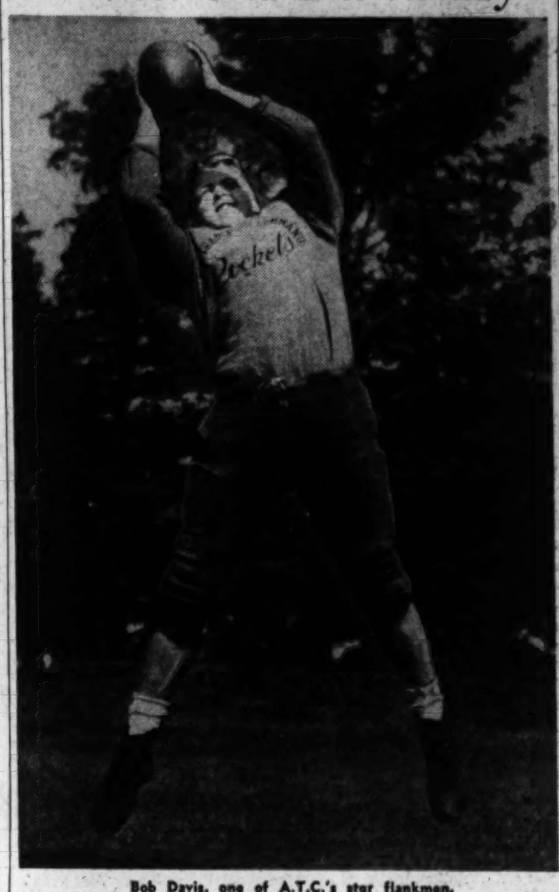
Army Fliers Reach Capital Today for Grid Test Sunday



Bob Davis, one of A.T.C.'s star flankmen.

Capt. Eddie Davidson's Air Transport Command Rockets move into Washington at noon today to keep their Sunday date at Griffith Stadium with the Cherry Point Marine Flyers.

IImmediately after arriving the Rockets will take the field at Catholic University for their last really strenuous workout of the week. Only a light limbering up drill is billed Saturday.

The Leathernecks will get here Saturday at noon in time to taper off in a local workout.

The Rockets snapped through their final home workout at Nashville Thursday afternoon—a two hour session devoted largely to perfecting timing and finess of offensive dazzlers intended to bewilder the Marines.

Particularly outstanding in the last home workout was the play of the ends. Lieut. Preston Flanagan, ex-Texas U. ace and Sergt. Nick Scollard of St. Joseph's were making the passers look good with smart catches while Capt. Joe Duckworth, Colgate, and Corpl. Bob Davis, Penn State, turned in jam-up defensive performances.

Meanwhile the demand for tickets t oWashington's first service game was mushrooming. To take care of the requests for free tickets by servicemen, several blocks of free ducats for men and women in uniform have been placed at the Servicemen's Ticket Hut on Post Square on Pennsylvania ave.

ATC and Marine officials anticipate a near capacity crowd Sunday. The long range Army weather forecast is for clearing and cool weather.

All but 6000 of the stadium's reserved seats are going free to servicemen. Sale of the 6008 is to offset the actual cost of bringing the teams to Washington. Use of Griffith Stadium, except for actual operating costs, has been donated by Clark Griffith.

Minor League Head Blasts Rickey Deal

Durham, N. C., Oct. 25 (U.P.)—Minor League Baseball Commissioner W. G. Bramham, lashing out at the "carpet-bagger stripe of the white race," said today he would approve the signing of a Negro player by Montreal although it might prove harmful to the game.

In an apparent criticism of Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers who arranged the signing of Negro Jack Robinson by the Dodgers' International League farm, Judge Branham said:

"Whenever I hear a white man, whether he be from the North, South, East or West, broadcasting what a Moses he is to the Negro race, right then I know the latter needs a bodyguard."

Bramham said that since there was no law in organized baseball prohibiting the employment of a Negro, "nothing else appearing that I know of, Robinson's contract will be promulgated just as any other contract.

"That is a matter insofar as our rules are concerned which is left entirely with individual leagues and their clubs," Bramham said.

Then Bramham, in reply to a request for his personal opinion in the matter, said that he had no hesitancy in stating his views since "they are too well known to the leaders of that (Negro) race throughout the country to require elucidation and are the same as I outlined to them in 1943.

"It is my opinion that if the Negro is left alone and aided by his own unselfish friends of the white race, he will work out his own salvation in all lines of endeavor.

"It is those of the carpetbagger stripe of the white race, under the guise of helping but in truth using the Negro for their own selfish interest, who retard the race. The Negro is making rapid strides in baseball, as well as other lines of endeavor.

"They have their own form of player contracts and as I understand it, their organizations are well officered and are financially successful. Why should we raid their ranks, grab a player and put him, his baseball associates and his race in a position that will inevitably prove harmful?"

Bramham then made his implied criticism of Rickey and added:

"When the Negro needs counsel, guidance or assistance from his white friends, he will let it be known and will be found meeting with a ready response, unaccompanied by ostentation or trumpeting."

No Protest Received Here By Commissioner Chandler

Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler said yesterday he has received no protest from the Negro American League over the controversial signing of Jackie Robinson by a Brooklyn farm team.

Robinson was signed by Montreal of the International League. Last season he played shortstop for the Kansas City Monarchs.

Chandler returned to his office yesterday from a trip to New York and said "there is nothing before me for a decision in that matter."

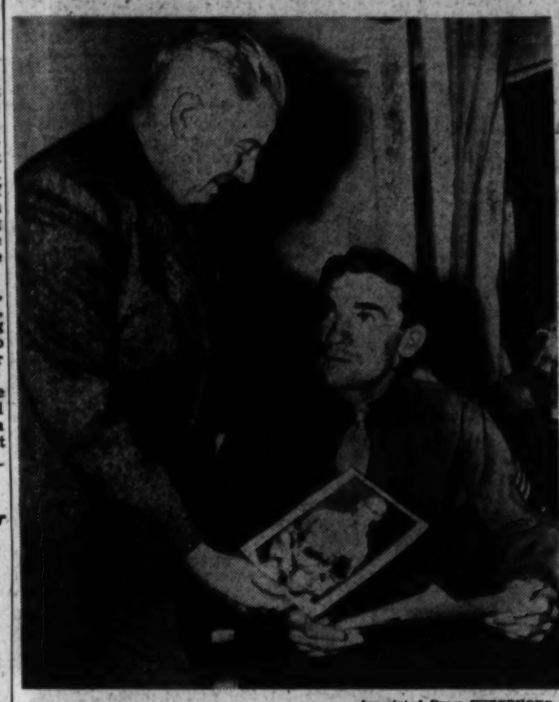
Tonelli, Bataan Death March Survivor, Returns to Football



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

FROM PRISON CAMP TO CARDINALS—Bataan Death March survivor Mario (Motts) Tonelli, right, former Notre Dame star, signs his contract with the Chicago Cardinals as owner Charley Bidwell looks on. Tonelli is holding a picture of himself taken in October, 1944, when he was in a Japanese prison camp.

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—The National Football League today welcomed home one of its bravest war heroes, Mario (Motts) Tonelli—behind him the horrors of the Bataan death march and 42 months in Jap prison camps.

Lean, quiet Tonelli signed a new contract with the Chicago Cardinals amid the flashing of photographer bulbs. Under prodding, he told newspapermen a sketchy story of his role in the last stand of Bataan, of the ill-famed 200 mile death march, and of a feeble existence in five Jap prison camps.

But mostly, Motts—a technical sergeant on a 90-day furlough—wanted to talk about rejoining the Cardinals whom he last played for in 1940.

"I'm in shape," the former Notre Dame fullback asserted. "I weigh 184 now. That's only 6 pounds under my old playing weight." He didn't mention that after 93 nightmarish days on a Jap prison ship, he was 55 pounds under his old playing weight, a cadaverous 135-pounder.

May Play Sunday

Tonelli, who was liberated from the Toyoama prison camp on August 27 and returned to the United States October 1, may see his first football action Sunday against the Packers at Green Bay.

Tonelli brightened with one of his rare smiles. "You know, now that's all over with, it doesn't seem to have happened to me," he grinned. "The biggest job I can think of now is trying to cover Don Huston."

The war was over quickly for Motts, but not so quickly that any question of it doesn't leave him grim-faced and silent. What about the retreat from Clark Field to Bataan? What about the night jungle fighting along Bataan in the heroic last stand before Corregidor? Did he tangle with any Japs, face-to-face?

"Let skip all that," brusquely asserted Tonelli, who was an artilleryman attached to a three-inch gun. "Just say that artillerymen, pilots and engineers, everybody, were infantrymen."

Had to Be in Shape

He lasted the torturous march of American prisoners from Marvelos to San Fernando in good shape, Honelli recalled. "It didn't hurt a bit that I was a former football player," he said. "You had to be in shape to take that treatment. Lack of water was the worst thing about the march."

Tonelli spent two years at the Davau penal camp and was at two other Philippine prison camps before the American landings forced the enemy to withdraw to Japan. It was on the trip from the Philippines to Japan that Tonelli became emaciated. With other prisoners, Motts was packed in the hold of a small freighter for 93 days.

Dodson Rides $3.80 Choice In Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 25.—The usually consistent Calumet Farm horses were beginning to reveal beaten favorites as stock equipment on todays' program, but one of the Devils' red and blue representatives finally got home in front. A crowd of 12,500 installed Twosy as the public choice in the Senaldo, best offering of the afternoon, and the 3-year-old daughter of Bull Lea and Two Bob scampered to the finish line a length and a half in front of her closest rival.

A field of seven competed in the test of 6 furlongs, and Twosy, strongly handled by Jockey D. Dodson, rewarded the faithful with a $3.80 mutuel. Despite intermittent rain, the track was in good condition and the winner was clocked in 1:12 1-5.

The victory was the fourth of the year for Twosy in 12 starts. In seven of her outings she has lived up to her name by finishing in second position. Her action today gathered her $2200 to bring her seasons' total to $23,155.

Quarter Moon set most of the pace, but was no match when Dodson placed Twosy to a drive in the early stretch. Cassis, closest to the pace, was a weakening third.

The Washington-owned Anatolia, flying the colors of Gustav Ring, was a four-length winner in the fifth event. Paying a $19.10 mutuel, Anatolia closed four lengths in front of William Helis' Teddy's Vixen with Walter M. Jeffords' Wichuralana third in the field of 12 2-year-olds going 6 furlongs. Apprentice Willie Cherry rode Anatolia to the front approaching the stretch and the daughter of Pilate drew out. Calumet's Fly Off, the favorite, was in trouble at the far turn and failed to rally when clear. The winner was clocked in 1:13 4-5.

Delphian Scores

William Helis' Delphian, well handled by Jockey Eddie Arcaro, was the winner of the second race, which brought together a dozen 3-year-olds for a test of a mile and 70 yards. Delphian finished a length in advance of Mrs. D. G. Smith's Audible. A length and a half farther back came Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Early Bird to be third. The winner paid $8 and was clocked in 1:47 1/5.

Daily double on the "4 and 2" combination of Calcutta and Delphian paid $139.80.

BETWEEN RACES . . . Jockey Eddie Arcaro is limping these days, but he is riding winners . . . He has a knee injury . . . Pimlico has set aside a block of reserved seats for Walter Reed Hospital patients who are being brought over on Thursdays and Fridays by the American Red Cross . . Apprentice Don Padgett, who broke his arm in an auto accident, has left for his home in South Carolina . . . He hopes to be in saddle shape when Gulfstream Park opens, where he will ride for the Bobanet Stable.

Hopeful Terps Off for Game With West Va.

By Newton Bowers
Post Staff Writer

En Route to Uniontown, Pa.—With high hopes of bounding back into the collegiate grid limelight after suffering a startling upset last week, Head Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant and his University of Maryland football contingent embarked this morning for Uniontown where the Terps will undergo final tuneups before meeting University of West Virginia's Mountaineers in Morgantown tomorrow.

Victims of Virginia Tech in Blacksburg last Saturday, the Terps have had nothing but rough treatment this week in way of practice, and Bryant has not overlooked a thing in getting his charges ready for the rugged Mountaineers.

Squad Bears Down

Bryant announced at the beginning of the week, "Every position on the team is open," and from that point on the boys bore down with untiring effort.

Bryant, well aware that he is facing one of the toughest games on his schedule, cautioning his Terps to "disregard West Virginia's three setbacks. We'll have to be in top form to overcome West Virginia, and I think by game time, we'll be ready—physically."

Like Maryland, West Virginia got off to a good start this year, plastering Otterbein, 42-7, but the Mountaineers' next encounter found their arch rivals, Pitt's Panthers, beating them 20-0. West Virginia bounced right back, blanking Dexel Institute of Philadelphia, 42-0, but lost to Temple, 28-12. All in all, the Mountaineers have scored 96 points against 77.

Terps at Full Strength

For the first time since swamping Guilford (N. C.) College, 60-6, in their opener, the Terps will be at full strength. Hammerin' Hank Bonk, leading scorer in Maryland with 37 points, Bill (Red) Poling, speedy broken-field artist, Vic Turyn, regular quarterback, and Guard Dick Johnston, whom Bryant claims to be one of his better linemen, have come off the injury list with a bang, flashing form of old and if these boys get going—look out Mountaineers!!

Middies Ready For Quakers; Scott Drills

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP).—Light scrimmage, in which only the fourth team participated, and defensive workouts designed to polish plays for all other units, featured Navy's next to last practice session today before taking on Pennsylvania at Philadelphia Saturday.

Halfback Clyde Scott, Middie backfield mainstay, engaged in practice today for the first time since being carried from Baltimore Stadium last Saturday after having been injured during the Georgia Tech-Navy game. He may see service against the Quakers.

Kiser May See Action

Navy coaches also disclosed that Chuck Kiser, stalwart tackle, who suffered a sprained ankle against the Jackets, stands a 50-50 chance of getting into Saturday's lineup, although Newbold Smith will start at right tackle.

Bob Jenkins, Navy's All-America fullback, will not see action against either Penn or Notre Dame, academy authorities said today. It is possible, it was learned, that he may get into the contest with Michigan scheduled for Baltimore on November 10. The Talladega (Ala.) ace is able to attend classes after being injured against Duke, but his athletic activities have been curtailed for at least another fortnight.

In view of President Truman's Navy Day broadcast from New York, the Navy-Penn game will start at 2:05 p. m., instead of at 2:30, as originally scheduled, the academy today announced.

Brigade Moves by Water

First and second classmen of the brigade of midshipmen, numbering about 1500, will leave the academy for Philadelphia after their "pep rally" Friday evening, boarding Chesapeake Bay steamers State of Pennsylvania and Mount Vernon for the journey. Itinerary of the trip calls for the Middies to shove off from Annapolis at 9 p. m. Friday and arrive at the Chestnut st. pier in Philadelphia at 10 a. m. Saturday.

At noon on Saturday the brigade will begin the parade to Franklin Field via Market st., Woodland ave. and 33rd st., entering the field at 1:30 at the southwest entrance.

The football squad will travel from Annapolis to Baltimore by bus Saturday morning and travel to Philadelphia by rail. The team will return to the academy immediately following the game.

Beau Jack Sought for Bout at Arena

Arrangements were completed yesterday by the Turner-Menendez boxing combine to bring in Beau Jack, former lightweight champion, to meet the winner of Monday night's match between Oscar (Atomic) Wright, District boxer, and Charlie Millon, of Baltimore.

The Wright-Millen victor, Menendez, said would face the Jack within five weeks at the Arena. Menendez stated that Chick Wergeles, who manages the erstwhile title holder, who recently was discharged from the Army, plans to use the Washington match as the first step on a tour preparatory to a big shot at Madison Square Garden.

Beau Jack engaged in fights here with Maxie Starr and Nick Latsios, winning both by knockouts. He resumed training recently in New York.

Wright has won 37 out of 41 pro. fights, while Millen, trained by the old Baltimore ace, Tommy Mollis, recently took two bouts from Norval Gadids.

Jackie Cranford, local heavyweight, makes his first pro. start here after 40 months in the United States Coast Guard, boxing Carrington McNutt, of Baltimore, in an eight, while Herbie (Biff) Jones, the Southeast "Fighting Schoolboy," makes his local pro. debut in an eight against Babe Kelly, of Philadelphia.

Bobby Parsons, Eddie Lyles and Jimmy McGriff also are on the all-star card. Popular prices will prevail.

Condit, Former Football Star, May Sign Today With Redskins

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Merlyn (Merlin the Magician) Condit, who came into the Redskin's possession after the '43 season along with tackle Joe Ungerer and halfback Dean McAdams from the Brooklyn Tigers in exchange for three Redskin reliables—Bob Masterson, end; Ray Hare, back, and George Smith, center—arrives in town today with a fresh service discharge and seeking a fresher paper—a Redskin contract.

Condit, a triple threater with the Tigers during the 1942 season, his last before enlisting, contacted Redskin officials yesterday from his home in Charleston, W. Va., and was told to report today for a contract conference. If things pan out for both parties, which they figure to, he will sign today.

Starred With Dudley

Condit spent three years with the Brooklyn Dodgers-Tigers from 1940 to '42 inclusive. In '42 he vied with Bill Dudley throughout the entire season for offensive honors and finally finished second to the former University of Virginia All-American in grounds gained, 696 to 647 but showed a better average, 5 yards per rush to 4.3 for Dudley. Condit was also third in pass interceptions and led the league in punt returns, 21, for 210 yards. He was eighth in scoring with 37 points.

The former Carnegie Tech All-American of 1939 never played the "T" formation and hasn't touched a football since 1942. Whether or not he can swing back into shape with the Redskin system remains problematical. Club officials yesterday estimated he wouldn't be ready for at least several weeks.

All of which means the Redskins will invade New York tomorrow, following their last workout for Sunday's battle with the New York Giants, with their 31-man squad.

Aim to Stop Cuff

Yesterday the club continued adding a new offensive trick or two to throw at the Owenmen while continuing to brush up a defense calculated to stop Ward Cuff's reverses and off tackle slices which always cause trouble, and against Arnie Herber's arm.

Save for minor bumps, such as Cece Hare's aching shoulder and Ernie Barber's charley-horse which is improving rapidly, the Redskins will go into Sunday's game in first class shape.

Word from New York yesterday reveals the Polo Grounds will be sold out and that the Redskins will rule 14-point favorites, following last Sunday's upset, 24-14 of the Eagles, while the Giants were getting themselves knocked off by the previously victoryless Pittsburgh Steelers, 21-7.

War Date Upset At Jamaica; Bertie S. Wins

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Graham's War Date, rated queen of the 3-year-old fillies in training since Busher and Gallorette were sidelined, suffered a bad setback today when she could only finish third behind Isidore Bieber's improved Bertie S. and C. V. Whitney's Recce in the $10,000 added Juno Handicap.

Bertie S., which recently caused another upset by beating the older star Apache, made it three straight triumphs as she led Recce home by a length and a half to pay $25.10. War Date was another length behind, and certainly not disgraced. War Admiral's sterling daughter, recently heroine of the Ladies' and Beldame Handicaps, simply could not spot her two conquerors so much weight and prevail over a mile and a furlong of sloppy going.

Mrs. Graham's colorbearer went postward at 4 to 5, with Recee a close second choice. The latter won her last two here and set the track record for six furlongs, 1:10 1/5.

Bertie S., weighted at 110, was timed in 1:51 flat and earned $6700. War Date carried 126 and Recce 118. Rain kept the attendance down to 17,736.

South Carolina Holds Clemson To Scoreless Tie

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 25 (AP).—Favored Clemson did all the threatening, but couldn't budge past South Carolina's defenders with goal in sight today and the forty-third annual football battle between the Old State rivals wound up in a scoreless tie.

A capacity crowd of 23,500 sat through a drizzling rain to see the Tigers set off several long advances only to be stopped by a strong Gamecock line, fumbles or pass interceptions.

Right off the bat, the Tigers pounded nearly 50 yards down to the South Carolina 17, where a pass interception halted them.

Twice in the second period Clemson was within Carolina's 10-yard line. Once Carolina held for down on its own 5. A Clemson fumble ended the other Tiger chance on the 6-yard line.

Scotch Soccer Players Demand More Money

London, Oct. 25 (AP).—Trouble in Great Britain's Soccer League, where the players are threatening to strike for more money, spread today to Scotland.

The Scottish league players turned down a compromise on their demands for a raise from four pounds ($16) a match to six pounds ($24).

Mike Jacobs Offers Woodcock, British Champ, Bout Here

New York, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Promoter Mike Jacobs opened negotiations today for the first big international boxing match since the war when he offered Bruce Woodcock, British heavyweight champion, a shot at the light-heavyweight title held by Gus Lesnevich.

The bout would be staged in Madison Square Garden in January with Lesnevich's title at stake if the British fighter can make the 175-pound limit.

Jacobs cabled the offer to Tom Hurst, Woodcock's manager, when he learned that British restrictions which prohibited athletes from leaving their jobs, a wartime measure, had been lifted. Woodcock is a railroad worker.

He offered Woodcock either a title or nontitle bout against Lesnevich. Should Woodcock be unable to make the 175-pound mark—he usually enters the ring at 183 or 184—he would meet Lesnevich at catch weights, with the championship not involved.

Another Shore League Planned

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 25 (AP).—A second baseball loop may be formed on the Eastern Shore of Maryland by two teams denied franchises in the recently reorganized Eastern Shore League.

At least seven towns on the lower Eastern Shore and the Virginia peninsula are considering organizing a circuit, Ed Kelly of Pocomoke City and Dan Pasquella of Crisfield announced.

Kelly and Pasquella represented their respective towns last Sunday when the two teams were refused franchises.

Kelly said possible members would be Parksley, Belle Haven, Chincoteague Island and Cape Charles, Va., and Snow Hill, Crisfield and Pocomoke City, Md. It has been suggested that the loop be named the Lower Eastern Shore League.

Dudas Announces Ring Retirement

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 25 (AP).—Steve Dudas, 32-year-old Edgewater, N. J., heavyweight, announced his retirement from the ring today after he was stopped in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round bout by Jersey Joe Walcott of Camden, N. J., last night.

Dudas' manager, Freddy Huber, said: "Steve's legs are gone, there is no use of his going on."

Dudas turned pro after winning the New York amateur heavyweight championship.

Referee Paul Cavalier halted the fight last night after 1:30 of the fifth. Dudas had been knocked down in the fourth, and in the fifth was helpless against a furious attack. Dudas weighed 198 and Walcott 193.

Griffith Answers Rickey On Use of Cuban Players

Clark Griffith, president of the Nats, yesterday, defended his practice of hiring Cuban ball players following charges by Brooklyn Owner Branch Rickey that he ha dsigned Negroes described as Cubans.

"Cuban ball players have always been acceptable in organized baseball, and so far as I am concerned no racial problem is involved," said Griffith in a formal statement.

Griffith issued his statement in reply to Rickey after the Brooklyn owner took exception to Griffith's charge that he had "raided" the Kansas City Monarchs in signing Negro Jack Robinson for the Brooklyn Montreal farm team.

"It was not my intention to enter any controversy with Rickey in connection with the Robinson case," stated Griffith. "I was simply commenting on the ethics in the methods of obtaining the player. I always believed that contracts and players under reservation with any recognised and established baseball organization should be respected."

Griffith pointed out that the Kansas City Monarchs have been in an organized negro league for many years and that the owners of the team are protesting to

Clipper Iceman Open Play Sunday

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Clippers, Baltimore's hard skating hockey team, open their season here Sunday in an exhibition game with the New York Rovers.

The club will sport one of the heaviest defenses in the Eastern League this year, the team averaging 182 pounds.

Sixteen men have been working out daily and are ready to go.

Twelve of the lads hail from around Montreal and Quebec, two from Halifax and two from Baltimore.

Charlie Plitt, the Baltimore boy who played so well with the champion Curtis Bay Coast Guard Cutters, suffered a broken wrist yesterday and will be lost to the squad for at least four weeks.

Shank, Woods Fight

New York, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Cowboy Ruben Shank, Denver middleweight who was discharged from the Coast Guard October 12, and Lou Woods of Detroit were signed today for a 10-round bout at St. Nicholas Arena, November 19.

Bethesda Licks Jefferson, 15 to 0

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's gridders won their second game of the season yesterday, defeating Jefferson High, of Falls Church, 15 to 0, at Bethesda.

Glenn Ferguson accounted for the first touchdown when, in six successive runs, starting from midfield, he went over from the 10. Phil Briggs plucked a Jefferson pass out of the air and ran 90 yards to score in the final period.

Memphis Signs Mobile's Chozen

Memphis, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Memphis Chicks announced today signing of the Southern Association's all-star catcher, Harry Chozen of Mobile, and pointed to it as their first step toward a winning club in 1946.

By agreement with Mobile, Chozen became a free agent at the end of the season. He formerly owned and managed Lake Charles in the Evangeline League.

Chozen set a league record last season when he hit safely in 48 consecutive games. He had a batting average of .354 and drove in 53 runs. He was the unanimous choice of sports writers for both the mid-season all-star team and also the team picked at the close of the season.

Buckeye Coach's Two Sons Hurt

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Ohio State football coach Carroll Widdoes boarded a train for Minneapolis today, where his Buckeye players face university of Minnesota Saturday, after physicians told him his two young sons, victims of a hit-skip driver last night, were in "fairly good" condition.

Thomas, 5, and James, 13, were struck last night by a hit-run driver and hurled 75 feet against the back end of a truck. Both of Thomas' legs were fractured above the knee. James suffered severe cuts and bruises.

Church Women on Hill Today to Urge Action On New Council Platform

An organized group of church women will visit Capitol Hill today to lobby for a definite legislative program, as the first step to put churchwomen more actively into public life.

Leaders of the United Council of Church Women from all parts of the United States this morning will meet with their respective Congressmen, urging action on the platform adopted at the council's national board meeting which closed yesterday. One hundred and fifty women came to Washington for the conference.

Main points of policy which council members will take up with legislators and later carry home to 10 million follow church women, are:

1. Opposition to peacetime compulsory military training.
2. Creation of an international body to control the atomic bomb.
3. Establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee.
4. Extension of financial aid to United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Make Christian Vote Heard

According to Mr. George B. Barbour of Cincinnati, chairman of the council's committee on international justice and goodwill, it is time "to make the Christian vote heard." She pointed out the main reason the national board meeting was held in Washington was to give members a chance to present their views to Congressmen.

"It is part of the council's policy to apply Christianity to government as well as our own lives. We're interested in prayer and Bible study, and in being Christians, but we've got to be interested in seeing our country behave as a Christian," Mrs. Barbour said.

The council yesterday emphasized its stand against peacetime military conscription by sending President Truman a letter which read in part:

Not Pacifist Point of View

"Rather than to take part in a race for the largest army and the strongest weapons, we urge you to rely instead on work for the international abolition of conscription and the rapid development of world government and its police force."

Mrs. Barbour pointed out: "This is not a pacifist or negative point of view. We are not pacifists; we believe in an international, not an American army. In peacetime compulsory military training is unChristian, undemocratic and in the days of the atomic bomb, futile."

Mrs. Harper Sibley, Rochester, N. Y., council president; Mrs. Leslie Falk, Washington, chairman of the council's public affairs committee, and nine other council members yesterday presented their views on the atomic bomb to the Senator Kilgore Committee and several atomic bomb scientists.

Summing up the three-day meeting, held at First Congregational Church, Mrs. Sibley said members' most significant achievement was, "We made Washington an interracial city for the moment."

A high percentage of delegates were colored. They were housed in the homes of white delegates and vice versa. All meals were served in the church by Congregational Church members.

"I am greatly impressed by the unity of the women. We didn't have a divided vote on anything although we were all divided as to geography, political affiliation, denomination and race," Mrs. Sibley said.

Mrs. Sibley, mother of six children, earlier this year was selected as American Mother of 1945 by the American Mothers Committee of the Golden Rule Foundation.

Town Talk

—By Eva Hinton

James Lawrence Houghteling is the highest type of man but he uses what is, traditionally, the lowest form of wit. He makes puns! What's more he whips them out so quickly that you haven't time to shush him or to prepare NOT to laugh, the treatment usually meted out to punsters.

The other evening at the Horace Smiths' dinner, Mr. Houghteling asked how I had broken my toe. (There's that infirmity again.) I'd just told him that it "happened in the ocean this summer when he opined, "It must have been your undertow."

Colonel and Mrs. Smith entertained their guests at the 1925 F Street Club aided by Mrs. Smith's pretty daughter, Virginia Summerlin. The occasion was Mrs. Smith's birthday and, of course, Virginia's grandfather, George T. Summerlin, was on hand to offer his congratulations. Mr. Summerlin, chief of protocol at the State Department, is the only person I know who can mix gaiety, kindness and protocol in just the right proportions.

The party had a delightful prewar flavor brought up to date by the presence of some dynamic military men and their attractive wives. There was brilliant Lieut. Gen. Wade Hampton Haislip escorting pretty Mrs. Haislip who wore pale blue with touches of gold.

It was General Haislip's outfit that captured the golden book of Vienna in which the city's important guests wrote their names. The signatures include those of Hitler and his top henchmen, and the book now reposes in the Pentagon Building.

TWO BACHELOR major generals (don't crowd, girls) were Gen. Eugene Harrison and Gen. Joseph Mahaffey, the latter governor of the Panama Canal Zone. Maj. Gen. William Rose, who soon will leave for the Philippines and the post of deputy to Gov. Paul McNutt, escorted charming Mrs. Rose.

Col. Everard Olsen came with his vivacious wife and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins came with her son, Lieut. Warren Robbins. Dainty and chic Mrs. Robert Scotten came without her husband, the United States Ambassador to Ecuador, who was in New York. The Scottens are at the Mayflower for a few weeks before returning to his post.

Among the Smiths' other guests were the Alfons Landas, the Eugene Carusis, the Julian Chetwynds, Mrs. Selden Chapin, Gen. Julius Holmes, Mrs. John Magruder, Mrs. William MacCracken and Col. Curtis de Ware.

A GAY AND intimate party was the cocktail party given by James F. Mitchell, jr., for his father, popular Dr. James F. Mitchell, and for Dr. Mitchell's fiancee, Miss Madge Ritchie.

Miss Ritchie (she's Mrs. Mitchell now because the wedding took place yesterday afternoon at St. Alban's Church followed by a reception at the Alibi Club) is a Georgetown cave-dweller and a neighbor of the Cabot Lodges and the Albert Deweys on P st.

Never did Jimmie Mitchell's apartment look more attractive with flowers, soft lights and polished antiques than it did in honor of his father that afternoon.

Among the guests were Admiral and Mrs. A. M. Charlton, Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Chappell, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Harry D. Mitchell. Also offering congratulations to the bride and bridegroom were the Blair Childs, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Mrs. Durham Wood, Lieut. Comdr. Jack Meikle and Mrs. Gladys Chamberlain.

Chilean Decorates Four Americans

Four American officers were decorated with the Chilean Order of Merit Wednesday by the Chilean Military Attache Col. Ernesto Medina, for bringing about closer relations between Chile and the United States. The awards were given at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel and Colonel Medina acted as host.

Receiving the Order of Merit were Brig. Gen. Russell A. Osmun, Col. Clark Galloway, Col. William Campbell and Col. William Adams.

Attending the luncheon were the Charge d'Affaires of the Chilean Embassy, Arturo Bascunan; Capt. Oscar Nevares, Maj. Osar Avendano, Maj. Julio Vargan, Maj. Alfredo Carrasto, Capt. Edmundo Villarroel, Lieut. Col. O. T. Jamerson, Lieut. Col. Davis Harrington, Lieut. Col. Gustave Pabst, jr., and Col. Carl Chapman.

PANCAKES SHOW UP on more than breakfast tables. Crepe suzettes, blinis and the Austrian "nockeri" are all delightful versions of the pancake. You can roll yourself to fame as a cook if you will roll tender pancakes and serve with rum or fruit sauce

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Go Easy on Griddle Greasing, Limit Turns, for Light Pancakes

During the course of World War II, many adjustments and substitutions have been necessary in meal preparation. But never has the pancake been retired because of lack of ingredients. Butter to slather on the golden disks has been short at times, but a crisp, tender, flavorsome griddlecake can be eaten with sirup and the butter will never be missed.

However, the recent announcement that butter is to require but eight points per pound will give added incentive to bring out the pancake griddle and turner. I once knew a chap who made the most tender griddlecakes you could ever imagine. His guests were always asking for his recipe. They would follow the recipe to the letter, but they never seemed to achieve cakes quite so crisp, flavorsome or brown. So on one occasion we decided when he made his cakes to scout the pancake maneuvering. Our finding was that he added an EXTRA amount of melted BUTTER.

And this brings us to the question, when is a pancake not a pancake. When it is a soggy, heavy-as-lead, flattened dough that is badly baked. Some cooks think to make a pancake you simply whip up some batter, dash it on a liberally oiled griddle, flip flop several times, stack several cakes on top of each other, and then serve.

Turn Cakes Only Once

Such is not the procedure that makes griddle cakes to meet the approval of a pancake virtuoso. To be sure the mixing of ingredients is important, but even a well-mixed batter can be spoiled in the baking. One iron-clad rule is: Never turn a pancake back and forth, cook only once on each side. The air bubbles that form in the batter furnish the lightness, so don't cook the pancake so long that these bubbles are all broken up, resulting in a lead-like cake. Whoever started the stacking of pancakes didn't know his pancakes, for that is no way to keep the circlets crisp.

If you're a sleepy head and don't get up early enough to mix the batter in the morning, then do so the night before and in the morning at the last pregriddle moment, add the baking powder.

Remember to go easy on the griddle greasing. A small amount rubbed over the griddle with a piece of paper will do the trick. The griddle must be very hot.

Variations Galore

Old-fashioned is a name that goes with pancakes as much as syrup and sausage. There are many variations. The following recipe is one that turns out a delicious cake of the old-fashioned variety. It makes about 18 to 20 cakes—depending upon the size of cake.

OLD FASHIONED GRIDDLE CAKES

Beat 3 eggs until fluffy. Beat into the eggs, 2 cups buttermilk or sour milk and 1 teaspoon baking powder. Sift together between 2½ and 2¾ cups all-purpose flour, depending upon the thinness of batter desired, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons sifted brown sugar, and then add the flour mixture gradually to egg-milk mixture, alternating with 4 tablespoons melted shortening. Beat well after each addition. Transfer batter into pitcher, cover with cloth and let stand for about 3 hours, and preferably overnight, before using. When ready to bake, blend 2 tablespoons baking powder into batter. This recipe is designed for making the batter the night before or for serving the cakes at other than the breakfast hour.

If you want a pancake to serve for luncheon, or even for dinner, you can't improve upon the ones of the French Bretons — Cottage Cheese Pancakes. They believed that sour milk in the diet would retard old age. If the age idea doesn't prove of special interest, their distinctive flavor will.

COTTAGE CHEESE PANCAKES

Beat 3 whole eggs with ¼ cup granulated sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt and a few grains of white pepper. Sieve 1 cup cottage cheese into the mixture and beat well. Gradually stir into the mixture ¼ cup sifted all-purpose flour, or the same amount of unsifted whole wheat flour, beating well until the batter is smooth and free of lumps. Stir in 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine. Drop batter by tablespoons on a hot, lightly greased griddle and turn the cakes quickly as soon as the top bubbles.

Delicious griddle cakes can be made from stale bread crumbs. The following recipe is a Southern version and just the accompaniment for crisp fried chicken, ham or sausage.

PLANTATION PANCAKES

Soak 1 cup bread crumbs—stale ones—in 2 cups thin sour cream until they are very soft. Beat 2 eggs with 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons brown sugar and 3 tablespoons melted butter or margarine and add to bread crumbs. Add enough sifted all-purpose flour to make a thin batter. Drop batter by tablespoons on hot griddle and fry by directions for Old-Fashioned Pancakes. These cakes should be well browned.

The South also is responsible for other fine pancakes. The Creole version is excellent to serve for Sunday brunch, for it is rich with rice and toasted almonds. This is the recipe:

RICE ALMOND PANCAKES

Beat 1 whole egg and 1 egg yolk until lemon colored, then beat in gradually 1¾ cups milks and 1 cup cold cooked fluffy rice. When mixture is well blended, add ½ cup ground, blanched, toasted almonds. In another bowl, sift 1 cup bread flour with 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon brown sugar and ½ teaspoon salt. Make a well in center of flour mixture and pour in egg-milk-rice mixture. With a fork, gradually pull the flour into the liquid and when all is moistened, beat the whole mixture briskly until smooth and free of lumps. Stir in 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine and beat again. Fry in manner for old-fashioned griddle cakes.

BPWC Plans To Accelerate Health Project

By Genevieve Reynolds

The national advisory committee of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs went on record Wednesday to accelerate its Nation-wide health and accident prevention program. Proposals were made and adopted to mobilize full support for enlarged community health projects.

Club Notes

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, member of the Social Security Board, pointed out that on an average day, seven million workers are absent from their jobs because of permanent of temporary disabilities. "I think the boys in the service who have become accustomed to good health service will demand the same for their families and do something about present conditions.

"Some people fear the invasion of Government in the health field," she continued. "I am afraid that the Government won't take sufficient responsibility. To date all social security surveys show that lack of medical care is due to lack of funds."

Government Plays Lag

R. R. Zimmerman, assistant to President Truman, confessed that when it comes to health and safety programs, Government lags far behind industry.

"The contribution which psychiatry can make to postwar employment problems of both men and women has not begun to be understood," asserted Dr. Karl Menninger, director of the Menninger Clinic and member of the National Federation of BPWC's advisory committee, who flew from his home in Topeka, Kans., to attend the all-day conference at the Statler Hotel yesterday.

Judge Lucy Howorth asked the federation members to write letters to the American Mercury concerning an article by Frank Kingdom. "There were too many blind spots in that article," she said. "The health problem as discussed by the author were inaccurate and confusing."

There will be a terrible unbalance if education for women continues in the handicraft stage while the men's training is stepped up to the atomic age, according to Judge Howorth.

Others Participate

Other participants in the panel discussion included nonfederation committee members—Dr. George T. Palmer, United States Public Health Service; Norman Damon, vice president of the Automotive Safety Foundation, and Miss Esther S. Phipard, food specialist for the Department of Agriculture.

Members of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., who participated in the panel are Dr. K. Frances Scott, Massachusetts health education; Miss Helen F. Dunn, Maine public health nursing; Miss Ellen S. Woodward, national public affairs chairman; Miss Marguerite Rawalt, president of the District of Columbia Club, and Miss Frieda S. Miller, director of the Women's Bureau, United States Department of Labor.

Miss Margaret Hickey, president, BPWC, presided, and Dr. Irma Gene Nevins, chairman of the federation's national health advisory committee, planned the program.

Many Dinner Parties Precede Opera Opening

Mary Haworth's Mail

Her Husband Is Returning From Overseas And Bride Is Eager to Settle Down, but His Parents Want to Travel, Taking Them

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have been married a little over two years. He is now overseas and will be home soon. Each of us is an "only child," and we are very fond of each other's parents; but experience has taught us it is better to live by ourselves than with his family or mine.

His parents are very kind and generous with me and although we live in different States, they have been a great comfort to me (as I have tried to be to them) through letters since Jim entered the service.

Just before Jim went overseas he was given a furlough and his mother wrote him urging that we spend that time with them. She did not broach the matter to me, and Jim and I could only discuss it by mail and telephone. While we were with them during the furlough they mentioned several times that they were planning a three months' tour for the four of us, when the war is over.

Is It Selfish To Reject Plan?

THEY did not ask either of us if we would care to go; just took for granted that our plans would coincide with theirs. I told them it was my hope to get settled in a place of our own as quickly as possible after Jim got back. I think they realized then that the trip d not appeal to me, because it w not mentioned again. Howeve since they made the furlough pla without consulting me, I am afra they've been writing to Jim abo this.

I know that before he consent to go, he would make sure it w agreeable with me. And my vie point is this: He will need r after his war experiences. Wi the money we have saved, we cou afford a nice little second hone moon together, but nothing elaborate as the tour his paren have planned. And I don't thi it advisable to spend that leng of time with in-laws, especial when we've been separated long. Please tell me if I would selfish in objecting strongly to t trip.

L. B.

Wife's Attitude Makes Good Sense

DEAR L. B.: Your objectio to the tour make perfect sense. is Jim's parents who are being se ish, trying to treat Jim's marria as a sort of play house annex their lives, in a foolish attempt delude themselves that he has shoved off into a world of his ow hasn't established a kingdom his own right, with you as queen.

Their behavior is understandab and yet not pardonable. Even so-called normal times, almost devoted parents of children su denly grown and branching out in adult lives of their own, find the selves—in the first phase of a justment to dissolution of hous hold ties—anguished by the rea ization that innumerable half-k plans for group activities wi their youngsters are now broug to naught.

And when war thunders over t horizon to scatter such plans a the years set aside for them, t sense of being swindled by tim and of desperately wanting som how to contrive a second lien family companionship with so and daughters, is apt to be mu more intensely felt—especially the case of parents of an "on child."

Parents Make Poor Showing

SO we grant the poignant for of those emotions which anima your in-laws' behavior. Neverth less, it must be said that they gi a poor account of themselves—th seek to express their parent love in clutching ways that su tract from the stature of all co cerned,—when they try by any d vice, hospitable, benevolent what-not, to keep Jim on the fenc so to speak, between sonship a married man's estate.

In the latter domain, it is yo exclusive prerogative to be h mentor and guide in social pla ning, and they would honor ther selves and help him most by yiel ing to that truth and giving it the blessing.

Legation Party Fetes Recipient Of Decoration

By Marie McNair

As former colleagues from the State Department looked on, Jesse Benjamin Jackson, for many years United States Minister to Lebanon, was awarded the Golden Medal of the Order of Merit of Lebanon and Syria yesterday at a late afternoon party at the Lebanon Legation.

Mrs. Jackson was there, too, to see her husband receive the decoration, and in the gathering also were George Wadsworth, our present Minister to Lebanon, and Mrs. Wadsworth, home on leave from his post. And home from the Near East and finding old friends at the fete was Pinckney Tuck, United States Minister to Egypt, and William A. Eddy, our envoy to Saudi Arabia.

Dr. Charles Malik, Minister of Lebanon, and Mrs. Malik, stood in the French-furnished drawing room to welcome the guests, and after the presentation ceremonies were over everybody flocked to the dining room for tea, or to the bar set up in the sun room.

Loy Henderson, until recently our Minister to Iraq, was there with Mrs. Henderson, and among others were Mr. and Mrs. George V. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Ireland, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Merriam, Winthrop Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Savage, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Miller 3d, George T. Summerlin, Lowell Pinkerton, United States Consul General in Jerusalem, another foreign service officer on leave.

Mrs. Henry Flood, her son, Bolling Flood, and her daughter, Mrs. Horton Schoellkopf, whose husband is with the United States Legation at Beirut, were also at the party, and the family group included Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Schoellkopf, Mr. Schoellkopf's parents.

Town Topics:

There's no mistaking Gen. Leon Johnson, the famed flier who led the bomber missions on the Romanian oil fields. He has a Teddy Roosevelt mustache. Now chief of personnel services, War Department, the general, with Mrs. Johnson, was the center of attention at Maj. and Mrs. Alf Heiberg's cocktail fete the other day.

Mrs. Thomas Early (Virginia Flannery), wife of Major Early, Air Corps, will be singing lullabys before long.

Burks Summers has arrived home from a complete tour of South America by air on a survey and analysis trip for postwar business.

The Donald Russells—he's Assistant Secretary of State—are now getting their mail at 2301 California st. after a session of hotel life while searching for a house.

Virginians from the "horse country" aren't too pleased over the book, "The Young Ambassadors," from the pen of an Englishwoman who lived in Warrenton during the war and was in charge of a group of British refugee children.

At Mrs. Thad Brown's cocktail party Wednesday the guests were thrown into a panic by the announcement, "There's a car rolling down the hill." It turned out to be former Senator James J. Davis' car whose brake had given way and ended up a block away.

Here's a fashion note from Guatemala which unfortunately we can't copy. Senora de Garcia Granados, pretty wife of the Guatemalan Ambassador, sometimes dresses up a dinner gown with the quetzal—national bird of Guatemala—whose green and white plumage cascades gracefully from the shoulder.

Miss Harriet Sweet and Miss Ruth Herbert entertained at a shower Wednesday evening for Miss Betty Sweet, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William M. Sweet, whose marriage to Ensign Robert Dworschack, USNR, will take place next month.

REMEMBER, THEY HAD MESSAGES THEY WERE TO RADIO BACK FROM STATESIDE TO A GIRL HERE WHO WANTS TO CORNER ALL THE BIG BUSINESS AROUND THE AIRPORT...
SHE! THEY WOULDN'T MENTION NAMES—BUT THIS CHICK WAS GOING TO GET ENGAGED TO A COLONEL
...SO SHE COULD USE THE BETROTHAL AS A CHARACTER REFERENCE FOR HERSELF... THE COLONEL WANTED THESE GAG RADIO MESSAGES SENT TO HER, TO LET HER KNOW HE WAS HEP TO HER PLOT—AND TO SHAME HER INTO ACTING HER AGE...
WELL, THANKS AGAIN, LIEUTENANT!
THAT LOOKIE WAS SORTA PALE!..DOES THIS CLIMATE DO THAT TO YOU?

JOE PALOOKA

I LOST TRACK OF HER AFTER I WENT TO LUZON. EVERY MAN ON THE ISLAND WAS IN LOVE WITH HER.
YES...THEY COULDN'T HELP IT
THERE WAS ONE FLIER, A CAPTAIN VINES. HE WAS JUST MAD ABOUT HER... BUT SHE PAID HIM NO ATTENTION. SHE ONLY TALKED OF YOU, LORD, HOW SHE ADORES YOU!
I LEARNED FROM HER WHAT REAL LOVE [illegible] WITH ALL OF HER [illegible] BEAUTY, HER [illegible] GRACE SHE [illegible] COMPLETELY SPOILED.
..AND HER IDEA OF LIVING IS TO GIVE TO OTHERS SHE WAS AN INSPIRATION...IT WAS A PRIVILEGE TO HAVE KNOWN HER. PLEASE GIVE HER MY DEEPEST REGARDS WHEN YOU SEE HER.
I SURE WILL AN' THAN K'YOU EVER SO MUCH MISS BICKER.

WITH GARRY--I'LL TAKE THAT CHANCE, WILLINGLY!
NO, FLAME!--I WILL NOT ACCEPT THIS YOUNG MAN UNTIL YOU HAVE BEEN UNITED AGAIN--IN A PROPER CEREMONY!
